Blue Ribbon Jury Declares Smoking Causes Cancer

By FRANK CAREY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Heavy cigarette smoking is the principal cause of cancer of the lungs and the larynx and a health hazard so grave as to call for remedial action, a blue ribbon science panel concluded Saturday.

The nature of that action was not spelled out. However, Surgeon General Luther Terry of the U. S. Public Health Service said his agency will move promptly to recommend specific steps of the kind urged by the science group.

"I would advise anyone to discontinue smoking cigarettes," Terry told a news conference.

The 10-man special advisory committee on smoking and health took 14 months to evaluate more than 8,000 studies of the effect of smoking on health.

It undertook no fresh research but decided available evidence shows that cigarette smoking far outweighs all other causes of lung cancer and cancer of the larynx—in men and perhaps in women.

It had no such clear-cut indictment of cigarette smoking in the area of heart and blood vessel disease or lesser ailments sometimes associated with smoking.

But, broadly, the panel took the view that the more you smoke the more you risk early death.

The special group was not requested to make specific recommendations for laws or regulations to offset smoking hazards but it concluded:

"Cigarette smoking is a health hazard of sufficient importance in the United States to warrant appropriate remedial action."

Text of Smoking Report on Page 2B

After releasing the report, Terry declared that there will be "no footdragging" in seeking possible remedial steps.

In another major conclusion the committee of scientists said:

"In view of the continuing and mounting evidence from many sources, it is the judgment of the committee that cigarette smoking contributes substantially to mortality from certain specific diseases and to the over-all death rate."

The report, which ran to about 150,000 words and several hundred pages, hit hardest at cigarette smoking as being what it termed a significant cause of lung cancer, chronic bronchitis, and cancer of the larynx, or voice box.

The committee was more reserved in linking cigarette smoking with heart disease and circulatory disorders, at least as to any cause - and - effect relationship.

The report said in this respect:

"Male cigarette smokers have a higher death rate from coronary artery disease than nonsmoking males, but it is not clear that the association has causal significance."

But it said also that an association has been established between cigarette smoking in men and higher rates of coronary disease.

"It is more prudent to assume that the established association between cigarette smoking and coronary disease has a causative meaning than to suspend judgment until no uncertainty remains," the report said.

As for lung cancer, the report said that in men, cigarette smoking far outweighs other possible causes of the malady and "the data for women, though less extensive, point in the same direction."

It said the risk of developingg lung cancer for pipe smokers and cigar smokers is greater than for nonsmokers "but much less than for cigarette smok-

$10 Billion Economic Loss a Year Blamed on Smoking by Americans

By ALTON BLAKESLEE

NEW YORK (AP)—The government report on smoking dramatizes a great human and social issue.

The report says that an $8-billion-a-year industry — in sales, in jobs and incomes for thousands of people — is based on a product damaging to human health.

This industry pays out $3.3 billion a year in taxes.

But this industry also is costing American families perhaps $10 billion a year because so many men, so many wage earners, die too soon because of cigarette smoking, a famous statistician estimates.

Dr. Louis I. Dublin, retired vice president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., suggests this kind of dollar-sign look at the liabilities as well as assets of an industry in judging future public policy.

The dilemma is not exactly new.

Automobiles and gasoline and highway-building and industries supporting automotive transport are social and economic assets. Yet accidents kill 40,000 Americans a year and injure two million others, and exhaust fumes are suspected of injuring health through air pollution.

Radioactive fallout with its suspected health hazards is one risky price of developing atomic arsenals for national defense.

Looking at the liability side of the human balance sheet on smoking, Dublin estimates that a family loses $100,000, on the average, when a working man dies prematurely.

"The best estimate I can get is that we can ascribe 100,000 premature deaths a year to the smoking habit, and more particularly to the smoking of cigarettes.

"So 100,000 lives at $100,000 of value is equivalent to the loss of $10 billion dollars, and this in one year.

"To this item of liability should of course be added the losses sustained by families in reduced earnings, medical costs etc., during the protracted period of illness before death," Dublin says.

And governments lose tax receipts when wage earners die, and pay large sums in Social Security or other payments, he adds.

"From the public interest point of view, the tobacco industry is far from a glorious asset," Dublin declares.

One published estimate of deaths attributable to smoking lists 50,000 - plus charged to coronary heart disease, about 39,000 from lung cancer, and 12,000 to 14,000 from emphysema, a lung ailment.

Disease Glossary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is a glossary of diseases most usually mentioned in connection with smoking:

Lung cancer — There are a number of kinds of cancers of the lung. Smoking is usually associated with tumors that begin in the lining or skin of the bronchial tubes, the airway passages in the lung. The most common types are called epidermoid carcinoma and undifferentiated carcinoma.

Other cancers — Some 100 years ago scientists reported associations between tobacco usage and cancers of the oral cavity, the lips, mouth, tongue, interior of the cheek, tonsil and

Pensioners Will Find Additional Dollar in Checks

By STEPHEN M. AUG

DENVER (AP) — Colorado's 50,000 pensioners will find an additional dollar in their March paychecks following action Friday by the Colorado Welfare Board Friday.

The board voted 6-1 to raise the state's maximum pension from $113 to $114 to compensate for increases in the cost of living. The move will cost the taxpayers $600,000 a year, with the money coming from the state's hard-pressed general fund.

The board also voted to end semi-annual review of pensions and review them instead once a year. It decided to use cost of living figures supplied by the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics rather than those from the University of Colorado.

Board members felt that the government figures would be more accurate. The government figures will be used for the next three years, and the board set $114 a month as the base from which future pension adjustments will be made.

Not resolved was the question of how the additional money would be distributed to pensioners living in nursing homes. Welfare Director Guy Justis said this would be taken up at the board's February meeting. He said there were three alternatives.

First pensioners could receive the extra $1 and have $11 spending money each month, with the nursing home receiving the cur-

Town May Get Back Its Name Of Hot Springs

TRUTH OR CONSEQUENCES, N.M. (UPI)—They're going to revive the game of truth or consequences at this small New Mexico town Monday.

But no pot of gold will be at stake, instead the name of the town itself will be the victors' prize.

The 6,000 some residents of this Rio Grande Valley town are going to vote on whether to leave the name of the town at Truth or Consequences or whether to return it to the original name of Hot Springs.

The issue has split the community right down the middle.

Saturday both factions prepped for the big vote. The Truth or Consequences group held a big jeep parade, calling attention to the jeep derby held with the Ralph Edwards fiesta, an annual affair named after the Old Truth or Consequences radio-television program emcee.

Backers of the Hot Springs movement were busily tacking up posters around the town.

Edwards' promotion man, Mike Bailey, has been in town for weeks aiding the T Or C cause.

A heavy vote is anticipated. Truth Or Consequences acquired that name in 1950 when

U. S., PANAMA AGREE TO TALK PEACE FOLLOWING NEW RIOTING

No 'Real Revolt' Against Gov. Love Seen in GOP Move

By GORDON G. GAUSS

DENVER (AP) — Rebuffs suffered by Gov. John A. Love during the opening days of the Colorado legislative session appear to result from a determination by Republican lawmakers to survive the next election, rather than any intention to revolt against the GOP executive.

Love has been beaten—at least temporarily — on two issues.

First, the interim committee on Organization of State Government balked at his plan to reorganize the state government, placing most departments under one of six coordinators.

Second, the Senate voted 21-12 to ask the Game, Fish and Parks Commission to abandon its idea of placing a $5 yearly fee on each car using state parks or recreational facilities.

A few hours after the Senate vote Friday, the commission deferred notice on the $5 yearly user fee. It could come up again next month. A commission spokesman said the commissioners want to talk the situation over with the lawmakers.

Neither action of the lawmakers can be considered definitive yet.

Although the legislators are taking their first weekend recess of the year, the Legislative Council will meet Monday afternoon to talk over the reorganization idea. Even if the council turns it down, the governor could get individual legislators to press for its consideration by the entire General Assembly.

The House of Representatives still has to act on the Senate-approved parks resolution. It is likely to be pigeon-holed in committee Monday when it officially reaches the House. This technique was used frequently by the House leadership last year.

Gov. Love hasn't specifically endorsed the $5 parks fee, but he made it clear to reporters Thursday that he likes the idea of user fees.

The Senate action in rejecting the fee could have far-reaching effects upon the session since it seems to strike at the principle that the person who gets a serv-

Potentials of Space Work Are Vast, Springs Jaycees Told at Annual Meet

By RAY HERST
Gazette Telegraph Staff Writer

The successes of the six-year old U.S. space program are a result of a post war industrial phenomenon — the research and development corporation, a leading space expert said here Saturday.

At the same time, Addison M. Rothrock, former director of policies and planning for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, pointed out that the financial risks in such a program were too great to be undertaken by a free enterprise corporation.

Rothrock was principal speaker at the annual Colorado Springs Junior Chamber of Commerce banquet held at the Broadmoor Hotel.

During the banquet Fred von Pingle, a former employe of the Gazette Telegraph and now advertising manager for Pike Realty Co., was named Jaycee of the Year for 1963.

Mac Harvey, an employe of Doenges Long Motor Co., was presented with the "Harry Hoth Director of the Year Award" and former Mayor William Henderson was given the Good Government Award for 1963.

Robert Figge, who was installed as Jaycee president Saturday night, accepted the gavel from out going president Jack Williams, in other activities at the banquet.

Rothrock pointed out that the research and development area has grown tremendously since World War II and is primarily responsible for the U.S. reaching most of its space goals during the past six years.

"Our space program is symbolic of a new post war industrial phenomena — the research and development corporation," Rothrock said. "It may be either an independent entity or an arm of an existing corporation. The essential capital of this new business is the mental creative ability of its scientists and engineers."

He emphasized that 70 per cent of our space shots to date are aimed at the research and development field. The remainder, which takes in only the Telstar Relay and the Tiros weather satellites, have been put to practical civilian and military use.

"In this space program we are for the first time conducting a great national effort in science and engineering beyond the known military and the immediate welfare needs of the nation — a program for the maintenance of our national security and the furtherance of our national growth in the broadest sense of these terms," he said.

Rothrock said that because of the scope and risk of the space program, which promises little in immediate returns to industry and the people, only the government could undertake to finance such a program. Cost of the program to date is $10 billion.

"The unknown is too hard to comprehend, the risks are too great, the capital expenditures too heavy to accomplish these advances in any other way," he said.

But he said the potentials of space are too vast for the U.S. "to leave them untried."

"Only the government — that is the people as a whole could undertake this," he declared.

"Our space program," he continued, "shows as other national programs have indicated that we have reached that stage in our national and industrial progress that certain great and opportune advances can only be undertaken by the people as a whole — undertaken as a part of the public sector of our economy."

FRED von PINGLE

Rothrock said that we are advancing at such a stage that we cannot look back on major accomplishments since they are, in effect, happening simultaneously with our efforts to recognize them.

The result he said is a complete switch in the employment picture. The need for unskilled labor has been removed and in its place is a growing need for intellectual and skilled manual labor. He added that we have not yet solved the problem of what to do with our unskilled labor.

He warned that technological progress is much like an inverted pyramid — difficult to balance. This he said is a major problem we face in our space program.

But we entered into this space program to meet and sur-

PANAMA (AP)—Panama and the United States agreed Saturday night to open direct talks Sunday to settle their diplomatic differences.

By THEODORE A. EDIGER

PANAMA (AP) — New disorders flared at Colon Saturday as diplomats sought to take the U. S.-Panama crisis over the Canal Zone from the streets to the conference table.

U. S. troops used tear gas to force back crowds who threw stones into the Canal Zone at Colon on the Atlantic side and burned a switch house of the Panama Railroad.

Tension remained high in the wake of previous violence that has claimed 23 lives since Thursday.

On the diplomatic front President Roberto Chiari declared that an indispensible condition for resuming a climate of negotiations is the flying of the Panamanian flag wherever the U.S. flag is displayed in the U. S.-controlled Canal Zone.

It was a flag-raising incident that sparked the crisis which led Panama to break relations with the United States and scrap the 61-year-old treaty with the United States governing control of the waterway.

Fabian Velarde, press secretary for the president, said that Chiari's views were given at his first meeting with the five-man mission sent to Panama by the Organization of American

Charges May Be Filed in Bombing Case

The Sheriff's department said Saturday night that a definite decision is expected Monday concerning the filing of charges against a suspect being detained in connection with the bombing Thursday of a Colorado Springs home.

Undersheriff Doyle McCammon said the suspect, a service man, was contacted Thursday night following the bombing of the Melvin Healey home at 2711 E. Monument St. about 8:45 o'clock.

McCammon said the suspect may be given a polygraph test Monday, and indicated that the outcome of that test could have some bearing on the department's decision.

The undersheriff reported that the suspect had not been arrested and was not in jail Saturday night.

The bomb, a type used in military practice training, was thrown into the yard of the Healy home. It exploded without injurying any of the occupants of the house, but shattered front windows and splintered the front door. The bomb was apparently thrown from a passing car.

Occupants of the house at the time were Mrs. Healy, two of her daughters, aged 11 and 13, and another daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Pooler.

Healy was out of town at the time but was expected to return this weekend.

Two Take Over In India While Nehru Is Sick

By HENRY S. BRADSHER

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—Prime Minister Nehru surrendered India's helm to two subordinates Saturday amid indications he is sicker than official statements have led the world to believe.

Home Minister Gulzari Lal Nanda, 65, and Finance Minister Triuvallur T. Krishnamachari, 63, were assigned Nehru's routine duties and responsibiliy for carrying on the government for at least a week, an official source disclosed.

The decision for this temporary shift in the high command was communicated to President Sarvepalli Radhakrishnan, the figurehead chief of state, who is recovering from an eye operation.

Instead of returning to New Delhi as expected, Nehru remained under doctors' care in Bhubaneswar, the Orissa State capital 800 miles southeast of this city. Nehru, 74, was stricken by fatigue and high blood pressure there Tuesday after attending part of the 1964 convention of his ruling Congress party.

He is not expected to be consulted on anything less than major policy decisions for a month or more and may never be able to resume the 16-hour

Springs Man Inventor Of Remote Car Starter

How'd you like to lounge in your warm living room and be able to start your car in the cold outdoors?

Well, sir, you can do it, now.

Woody (Rusty) Marion of 1327 N. Weber St. has put a device on the market that not only enables you to start your car from the comfort of your home but to start the heater in the vehicle without leaving the house.

Marion is manufacturing and marketing the device, the remote control Lazy K car starter in kit form, which, he says, can be installed in an hour or less on the average car. It does not interfere with regular operation of the car and is tamper proof; the car can be locked and controlled only with the remote Lazy K car starter in the house.

The control box, which is connected to the car by a cable, has an ignition switch, a starter button and a gas button for starting the car. A second switch turns on the car heater.

At the top of the control box is a pilot light, which glows when the engine is running. Should the engine stop, the light goes out, and the motorist can again start the engine.

The kit comes with a 30-foot cable, which plugs into the Lazy K equipment installed in the car. Twenty-foot extensions also are available, so its possible to start a car "a block away."

Each kit is sold with complete instructions for installing the Lazy K starter.

"The Lazy K is 100 per cent functional," Marion said.

Marion now has jobbers in Texas, St. Louis, Akron, Ohio, and Colorado Springs.

A native of St. Louis, Marion moved to Raton, N.M., but came to Colorado Springs about three months ago. The Lazy K car starter is manufactured here by his Style-King Manufacturing Co. and by the ARF Electronics Co. of Raton.

Marion, who has had no formal engineering instruction, also has invented a "brake-pressure" stop light and a needle for leather work. The stop light, he said, is a tubular affair which lights up at each end when the brake is applied. As brake pressure is increased, the light in the signal light increases in length. The light is planned for about three-foot length.

Interest in the light, he said, has been indicated by American Motors.

The needle for leather work is about three inches long. The leather thong screws into one end of the needle, thus eliminating need for an eye.

There are school lunch programs in some 66,000 public and private non - profit schools in the 50 states and federal possessions.

HE'S STARTING HIS CAR—Woody (Rusty) Marion of 1327 N. Weber St. demonstrates how the Lazy K car starter, which he invented, is manufacturing and marketing, works. Marion is shown pushing the starter button on the device, which is connected to his car, a Chevrolet Greenbrier, by a cable. Since the engine in the vehicle is in the rear, Marion installed the Lazy K plug on the rear of his car.

CSU Receives Mechanical Institute Grant

A $48,900 grant has just been received from the National Science Foundation for an institute in fluid mechanics at Colorado State University this summer.

The institute will be held June 15 to Aug. 7. J.E. Cermak, civil engineering professor at CSU, is in charge. The session is part of the overall flluid mechanics program at CSU and is being planned as a bi-annual event.

Three lecture courses, one lecture and laboratory course, seminars and one field trip will constitute the formal program. Participants will be expected to take at least three courses (one to be fundamentals of fluid mechanics) for credit and attend all seminars.

Thirty teachers will be selected from thruout the nation to participate in the eight-week course. In addiion, 15 to 20 engineering graduate students at CSU will also take part in the Institute.

Formal courses and seminars will focus on developing the theoretical, experimental and applied aspects of turbulent fluid motion. Lecutres will be given on the main campus with the laboratory instruction to be held at the fluid dynamics and diffusion laboratory in the Engineering Research Center on the foothills campus.

Admission requirements include having a bachelor's degree from an accredited university in some field of engineering or science. In addition, participants must be engaged to teach at a university during the 1964-65 academic year.

The maximum stipend is to be $600, plus a maximum of $120 for each dependent up to four. Dr. Cermak says applications for the institute will not be accepted later than next Feb. 15.

Cheyenne High School News

By DWIGHT LOVE

A talent exchange program has been arranged with Palmer High School and will take place during February and March. Several of the acts from the Cheyenne Mountain Talent Show, which was put on as part of Homecoming, will visit Palmer around the end of February, according to Ellen Smith, secretary of assemblies at Cheyenne. Miss Smith also indicated that a show from Palmer High would vist Cheyenne Mountain in March. Among those acts which Cheyenne will send to Palmer are numerous vocal solos and groups. There are also short skits and modern dancers.

Another exchange program will take place the first and third weeks of February. These exchanges are with students rather than the talent type. A senior boy and girl from Cheyenne will spend the first week of February attending classes at Fountain -Ft. Carson High School and a pair of Fountain students will spend the week at Cheyenne Mountain. A similar interchange will take place between Air Acadamy and Cheyenne during the third week of the same month. It is the objective of these schools to promote interleague harmony.

Cheyenne Mountain has been invited by Northwestern Junior College of Sterling to participate in a field day for Spanish and German. Cheyenne students will compete in contests in comprehension, oratory, and extemporaneous speaking. The contests will be held April 4 and will include students from parts of Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska and Wyoming. Competition will be open to first thru forth year students and Cheyenne will have enteries in all four groups in Spanish. Since the German program at Cheyenne was just started this year contestants will enter only in the first year division.

John C. Hays Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. John C. Hays, has been named runnerup in a field of 870 in the achievement awards competition of the National Council of Teachers of English. Hays was nominated last spring by a panel of the schools English teachers to represent Cheyenne Mt. in the contest.

The School Band of America, an organization which sponsors a yearly concert tour of Eurpe, has announced that two students from Cheyenne have been chosen to make the month-long tour. The students are Thomas Lorig, a senior bassoonist, and a junior, Donald Paterson, who plays the trombone.

The C Club of Cheyenne is planning the initiation of its new members. The new lettermen will be required to help in the cleaning of the school grounds. The C Club is also planning an appriciation party for the girls in the Pep Club. The affair will be held in the spring after the spring sport lettermen are admitted to the club.

READY TO CLEAN UP—It will be sugar cubes and not the brooms that Dr. William Stone, chairman of the K-O Polio committee will be using. Fortunately, the organization of the Type Two Sabin oral polio vaccination clinic is in far better shape than the battered broom he is holding. The final opportunity for residents to receive Type Two vaccine i nthe current mass vaccination program will take place from 11:30 a.m., until 4:30 p.m., today.

K-O Polio Fight Continues With Mop-Up Clinic

The possibility of completely eliminating from the community type two polio virus...the type which this year struck both a Colorado Springs and a Pueblo resident is anticipated with optimism by the El Paso County Medical Society. The group offers type two Sabin oral polio serum today to all those who missed last Sunday's K-O Polio campaign.

Pueblo and Fremont counties are conducting similar campaigns. The "Mop-Up" clinic will be held in the Palmer High School gynmasium between 11:30 a.m., and 4:30 p.m.

A large supply of vaccine has been ordered.

Several clinics ran out last Sunday. All residents over three months of age should take the vaccine according to Dr. William Stone, chairman, who emphasized that Sabín vaccine eliminates carriers as well as protecting the individual against polio.

Residents may contribute 25 cents a dose to offset costs of the program. However, the serum is administered free of charge to all those who cannot afford it.

Type three vaccine will be available on Feb. 16. Anyone who misses one of the three types in the mass vaccination program man obtain the missing dose from his physician six weeks after his last dose.

To speed processing a registration form is printed in this newspaper.

FEDERAL TAX TIPS

BY ROGER E. WARD
Administrative Representative
Internal Revenue Service

TAX RETURN BLANKS: — As an added service to the taxpayers of this area we have installed a forms display rack in the main lobby of the Main Post Office where you may obtain Federal Tax Return Forms 24 hours a day, this being in addition to the forms rack in our offices at 521 South Tejon St.

ESTIMATED RETURNS: — Deadline for paying the final installment on estimate Federal income tax returns for 1963 is Wednesday.

If you have previously filed a declaration of estimated tax and events occurring in the last quarter of 1963 indicate that your income will be substantially more or less than your original estimate, you may be required to file an amended declaration by Wednesday.

This declaration should be marked "amended" and filed with the same District Director of Internal Revenue who received the original declaration. A blank amended declaration is printed on the back of the notice of payment due which the taxpayer received by mail, or Form 1040-ES (Amended) may be obained from our office. An original declaration of estimated tax for the year 1963 should be filed by Wednesday on Form 1040-ES by taxpayers who first became liable for filing an estimate during the fourth quarter of 1963. However, a taxpayer who is required to pay an installment, or who first becomes liable for filing a declaration, or finds it necessary to amend his declaration in the last quarter of 1963, need not meet the Wednesday deadline provided he files his 1963 income tax return and pays IN FULL the balance of tax he owes on or before Jan. 31, 1964.

FARMERS: — Farmers earning at least two-thirds of their 1963 gross income from agriculture should file their estimated 1963 Federal income tax returns, Forms 1040-ES, on or before Wednesday.

However, such estimate need not be filed if the farmer files his final return on Form 1040 and pays in full any tax due by Feb. 17, 1964. "Farmer's Tax Guide", which furnishes more detailed information on this subject, is available for the asking or taking from our display racks located in the Post Office and our local offices.

Increase Noted In Skiing Injuries

Skiing is rapidly becoming one of America's most popular winter sports. In northern climes skiing always has drawn its quota of fans. In recent years interest has spread over virtually the entire nation.

There are ski clubs in cities in east Texas. The members annually make a pilgrimage or two to the ski runs of the Rocky Mountains by chartered plane.

With the widespread increase in skiing there has come a consequent increase in ski injuries. Exact figures on skiers injured each day are hard to come by, but studies at individual resorts have shown that about three of each 1,000 skiers on the slopes each day likely will get hurt. On days when skiing conditions are poor the ration sometimes mounts to as high as 13 injuries for each 1,000 participants.

Medical men who have studied ski injuries report that most accidents involve beginners who attempt ski runs that are too daring for their ability. Loss of control, which usually means going too fast to be able to stop in an emergency, is the single leading cause of accidents.

Loss of control stems from poor physical conditioning, lack of experience, faulty technique, fatigue and excessive speed. Most accidents occur at noon and late in the afternoon, at the end of long periods of activity.

The better run ski resorts keep up a constant campaign for prevention of injuries. The instructors and the ski patrol remind participants of the elements of ski safety and urge avoidance of fatigue. Trails must be well marked and slopes closed when conditions become dangerous.

The individual skier can help to prevent injury to himself by being physically fit, having good equipment and learning how to ski under control. Preseason exercises to strengthen legs, particularly knees and ankles, are important. Good equipment includes release bindings, goggles and safety straps on skis. Most important is to remember that an early sign of fatigue is loss of control. Learn to ski under the guidance of a good instructor.

Individuals are strongly advised to learn about the safety precautions of the resort before taking the lift up for their first run. Information on condition of the slope and danger areas is readily available.

Skiing is an excellent sport and is encouraged as a part of the nation's physical fitness of the nation's physical fitness program. Most ski injuries could be avoided.

PLANS FOR NEW HOSPITAL — Vernon Bolton, who has been developing plans for a new St. Francis Hospital since he first came here 18 years ago, will see his dream come true soon. The plans he showed to the staff at a meeting at the hospital late last week will be completed and construction begun by July 1.

Deadline Set On Hospital Construction

A condition of a federal grant to St. Francis Hospital setting a July 1 deadline on the start of construction has placed heavy pressure on architect Edward L. Bunts, who reported to staff members Thursday that the deadline will be met.

"Under normal circumstances within the limited time involved; however, in order to protect your interests in the federal grant we are delegating of our staff to this project than would normally be considered practical. We will undoubtedly be faced with considerable overtime work in order to reach the deadline." Bunts said.

The hospital received word a short time ago that $850,676 has been allocated from Hill Burton funds through the hospital division of the State Department of Public Health.

The funds must be matched locally. The hospital fund drive has raised $542,784 in payments and pledges to date.

Dr. Vernon Bolton, campaign coordinator, told staff members that most of the pledges will be considered by the state in computing the matching funds. He pointed out that those pledges which extend beyond the completion date of the hospital in 1966 will not be included. He urged those who had made long term pledges to consider an earlier payment schedule so that the pledge could be counted.

A few changes in the plans for the three million dollar hospital are being made by the architect after which the plans will go to their consultants for structural, mechanical and electrical engineering. As soon as contract documents are fully developed, bids will be received contracts awarded and construction started.

Calcutta Reports New Religious Clashes

CALCUTTA, India (AP) — Troops were called out today to maintain order in the wake of violent clashes between Moslem and Hindus.

Police, who fired into rioting mobs Friday, said several persons were reported killed. However, further details were not available.

The area adjoining Calcutta was put under a curfew and demonstrations were banned in this city.

The demonstrations began Thursday, following reports that Moslems were killing Hindus in the East Pakistan area of Khulna, 75 miles east of Calcutta. The Indian press reported 29 persons were killed in the clashes.

Pakistan is predominantly Moslem. Indians are mosty Hindus.

The clashes in Khulna came after a hair, believed by Moslems to have come from the prophet Mohammad, was stolen from a shrine in the Indian port of the divided state of Kashmir Dec. 26. The hair was recovered Jan. 4 and restored to the shrine Friday.

Another Person Given Kidney in Transplant

DENVER (AP) — The 55th person to receive a kidney in a Denver transplant operation is a 34-year-old Marine veteran from Phoenix, Ariz.

He received the organ from his 27-year-old sister also of Phoenix, in a 5½ hour operation performed Friday by a surgical team from the University of Colorado Medical Center and the Veterans Administration Hospital.

Both were reported in satisfactory condition after the operation. The names of the donor and her brother, whose kidneys failed as the result of a form of nephritis, were not revealed.

The operation was performed a short time after the 20th death among the 55 who have received transplants here. He was a 25-year-old Santa Barbara, Calif., man who received a kidney Dec. 3 from his 57-year-old mother. He had been in poor condition since the surgery. The cause of his death will be determined by an autopsy.

Their names were not made public.

PROPOSAL TABLED

DENVER (UPI)— The State Game, Fish and Parks Commission has tabled a proposal to charge a $5-per-car users fee in Colorado state parks. A commission spokesman said the matter was tabled "in respect to Senate action. . .and because of questions in the Legislature." The Senate adopted a resolution Friday opposing the users fee.

During the past decade, annual sales of pianos rose from 155,000 to 208,000, according to a report.

Edwards offered nationwide publicity to any American city which would change its name to that of his show. Since that time Edwards has annual yl returned to Truth Or Consequences for the fiesta.

Opponents say the only ones benefiting from the publicity are Edwards and his associates and say they want the "real name", Hot Springs back.

The metamorphosis form Hot Springs to Truth Or Consequences never was complete.

For example, it still is Hot Springs High School and one of two weekly papers in the town is the "Hot Springs Herald."

MEMORIAM

The flag in the Veterans' Court of Honor will fly the week of January 12, 1964, in honor of Benjamin Lindt, Army, World War II. Memorial Gardens, East of Prospect Lake.

IN MEMORIAM

Gone but not forgotten, my dear husband, Clarence J. Emmert, who passed away three years ago today, January 9th, 1961, leaves a vacancy which can never be filled. Missed by his wife, Helen, and his son, John, and family.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of my wife, Minnie Moore, who passed away 3 years ago today, the 12th.

When the evening shadows are falling
And I'm sitting all alone,
If you could only come home.
Many lonely heartaches, many tears.
But always a loving memory of the one I love so dear.

Sadly missed by her husband,
Harry Moore

IN MEMORIAM

In Memory of Leslie E. Eason, who passed away one year ago — January 12, 1963.

Honey I just had to tell someone
How my heart aches both night and day
I'm glad you're resting in peace
So close to our home
You're free from that stabbing pain
God's Word says you know not anything
Your honesty and fair dealing toward all fellow men
Will forever be a guidance and a living symbol to us all.
The cogs of business run smooth as if you're still in the driver's seat.
I still go on dreaming as if we were still going hand in hand every step I take.
This year has been lonely and confusing
Deaths and divorces of dear ones.
Tragic world happenings.
Severe drouth, then abundant rain.
A nice young man and a tiny sweet bundle of joy joined our little family circle.
You'd have loved them as we do.
Relatives and friends have been wonderful to me.
I'll keep praying each night and studying God's Word like you wanted me to, hoping that some little something will turn others too, toward paths of righteousness.
You are sadly missed by your daughters
Gerald & Sally & Family,
Frank & Myrna & Family,
Charley & Gloria & Family,
Stan & Ila & Family,
Jimmie & Sandra,
and your brothers & sister.

Your loving wife, Marjorie.

Nixon, director of Public Utilities, for authority to execute addendum No. 1 to the contract with Bechtel Corporation whereby Bechtel will be authorized to extend its engineering services to that section of the Homestake pipeline lying between Trout Creek and Eleven Mile Reservoir. It is proposed at a later date an additional width street right-of-way will be provided for Airport Road. The city manager and director of public works recommend that a revocable permit be issued.

said Pattridge radioed the Trinidad Airport at 7:28 p.m. M.S.T. Friday and requested information on the weather here. He was told it was overcast and snowing.

Terrell said the pilot again radioed the tower a 7:56 p.m. and asked if its beacon was flashing. He was told it was and the tower asked him what color it was. Pattridge replied it was flashing red.

The Trinidad beacon is green. But there is a red flashing beacon on Fisher Peak Mesa, 15 miles northwest of Trinidad, and it is believed that signal was the one the pilot had mistaken for the one here.

A search team was also sent out from Ft. Carson Saturday morning, with a total of five ground vehicles, that were sent to Trinidad with a total of 11 personnel. The vehicles included an ambulance in case the searchers were successful in locating a plane wreck. The search team from Ft. Carson included men who are experts in mountain climbing and skiing.

U.S., Panama Agree To Open Peace Talks

States.

Chiari told the OAS mission also that before Panama could consider resuming diplomatic relations with the United States President Johnson must issue a statement that this will be done on a basis of an integral revision of existing treaties with the United States.

Chiari aslo reiterated charges of aggression against the United States stemming from U. S. military action against Panamanian demonstrators.

He accused the United States also of "economic aggression," saying U. S. officials in the Canal Zone were blocking highways running through the zone whose use is essential to Panama's economy.

But main stress was placed on the issue of raising the Panamanian flag, with Chiari saying this was the main cause of the present trouble. To see the banner raised alongside that of the United States "is the deep-rooted desire of the Panamanian nation," he asserted.

President Johnson sent new instructions Saturday to his chief diplomatic envoys in Panama. They are Thomas C. Mann, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, and Cyrus R. Vance, secretary of the Army.

Mann and Vance saw Chiari for an hour and a half on Friday night shortly after their arrival. Mann plans additional talks with Chiari.

Johnson got a written report on the initial meeting with Chiari, which was described as largely a factual assessment of the situation. In Washington, press secretary Pierre Salinger would not label the general situation either optimistic or pessimistic.

The task confronting the diplomats was a formidable one.

At the United Nations, Panama's chief delegate, Aquilino Boyd, demanded that the canal be nationalized or placed under international jurisdiction. Boyd also accused the United States of "bloody aggression."

The United States said it was ready to negotiate differences but there was no expectation it would give up the canal.

About 300 Panamanians took part in the four-hour demonstration at Colon. In addition to burning the switch house they set fire to cross ties for about 25 feet along the tracks. A Panamanian policeman trying to quiet the crowd was injured in a scuffle with a demonstrator.

Colon residents were reported making large food purchases, apparently stocking up in fear that stores would be forced to close.

Foreign Minister Galleo Solis arranged to show the OAS mission a 45-minute film of events Thursday night that sparked the violence in which 20 Panamanians and three U.S. soldiers were killed.

Latest Army figures said 82 U.S. soldiers and civilian personnel were wounded. Panama put its wounded into the hundreds. The three soldiers were killed by sniper fire at Cristobal on the Atlantic side of the zone.

U.S. officials in Washington said reports reaching there indicated that a sizable number of the 20 Panamanians killed did not die as a result of U.S. military action, but from actions of the rioters themselves.

The reports said hospital reports on 13 victims indicated that seven died from such causes as suffocation in a fire or from Molotov cocktails hurled by rioters.

Five bodies were recovered from a fire in the Pan-American Building in Panama City. There were reports here that the bodies also had bullet holes.

Dispatches to Washington reported also that the U.S. Army commander in the Canal Zone, Gen. Andrew P. O'Meara, said his troops fired only nine rounds of small - caliber ammunition during Thursday night's fighting.

Funeral services were held in the city of Panama for Ascanio Arosemena, a student killed in the violence. Large crowds turned out.

Panama's National Guard apparently was successful in controlling sniper fire from Panamanians. A brief shooting flareup was reported late Friday night on the border between the city of Panama and the Canal Zone, but no one was wounded. Some Panamanians were hurt by flying glass.

But the U.S. Army evacuated Tivoli guest house, a landmark in the Balboa section of the zone.

Pedestrian and auto traffic moved in and out of the Canal Zone Saturday through control points.

Units of the Panama National Guard aided in escorting a number of U.S. families from Panama into the Canal Zone.

Only slight delays occurred in the transit of ships through the canal. U.S. employes took over jobs which Panamanians could not fill, either due to unwillingness or inability to come into the zone from Panama.

Interest centered on the incident at the Balboa High School Thursday afternoon which set off the violence during which Panamanians attacked U. S. buildings and caused damage to property running into thousands of dollars.

A group of about 200 Panamanian students crossed over into the zone carrying a Panamanian flag they wanted to raise at the high school. They were protesting the flying of the U. S. flag outside the school by the U. S. students in defiance of an order from the Canal Zone governor. Under U. S.-Panama agreement dual flying of flags was to take place at stipulated points.

All agreed that the trouble about the flags—a highly emotional issue — provided the immediate motive for the subsequent mob action that caused the U. S. Army to take control of the zone from the zone police.

Great Potential In Space Race Is Discussed

pass a Russian challenge that we had not foreseen and for which we were therefore not prepared. Meet the challenge we did, and surpass it we have in all phases but one," he said.

Rothrock pointed out that Colorado, with its research and development of the Titan III missile, will play an important part in this nation's next step into space — the boosting of the Gemini capsule and the trip to the moon.

He said that some of the future space shots will have military significance but pointed out that "thru nucleonics and adaptation of it to our defense we may well have made all-out war unacceptable as an instrument of national policy by those who state they would destroy us."

Rothrock said that rapid development of technology should not be looked on as something new, but rather as part of the continuing process of development man has gone thru since he decided to "leave the cave and the forest."

He said that the discovery of nuclear energy has not been farther reaching than the discovery of fire and that technological progress is inevitable.

The Nation's Weather

(Report furnished by U.S. Weather Bureau Station at Peterson Field)

Heavy snow warning and hazardous driving warnings were in effect for a large segment of the midwest Saturday night and Sunday. A storm center, intensified while moving eastward across the state of Missouri Saturday, produced snow in a wide band from the Great Lakes to the Rockies.

To the rear of the storm center, cold arctic air is pouring down over the central states on strong northerly winds. To the south, precipitation took the form of light but steady rain across the lower Mississippi Valley into the Eastern Gulf States. Thunderstorms broke out in Louisiana and showers dotted the warm peninsula of Florida. Sunny but chilly weather occurred along northeastern coastal states, the interior far west and the plains of Olahoma and North west Texas. Los Angeles Saturday scored a balmy high temperature of 65 degrees. Miami, Fla., had 76. Near zero readings were reported in North Central states bordering Kansas..

ice should pay its cost. It is this idea which Republicans hope to use to raise enough revenue to keep the state budget in balance during the fiscal year starting July 1.

In each case where the actions countered Love's wishes, Republican votes were necessary to supplement those of Democrats to do the job.

House Speaker John Vanderhoof, R-Glenwood Springs, made the motion which blocked part of the reorganization plan.

Six Republicans went along with all 15 democrats in the Senate to beat down the parks user fees. They came from scattered sections of the states.

Several of them said bluntly they thought people in their districts don't want any charge for park and recreation use. Veteran Sen. Carl Fulghum, R-Glenwood Springs, who represents a tourist section, expressed fear of the bill's effect on tourism.

Nowhere is there any evidence at the Capitol of a major GOP revolt against the governor. There is an attitude among the Republican lawmakers, howevever, that they have an obligation to do what people in their districts want. It seems especially pronounced because 1964 is an election year and all legislators except 17 holdover senators must go before the voters.

days he had been working.

Several speculative questions were raised in Ne Delhi:

Is he too weak to travel?

Does he want to avoid a public appearance at the airport, in view of what has been officially described as a slight weakness of the left arm and leg?

Is he suffering from a brain tumor?

Health Minister Sushila Nayar shook her head when she was asked whether Nehru had a brain tumor.

"I don't think so," she said.

Herself a physician, Mrs. Nayar said Nehru is on the way to recovery, but "is not perfectly all right yet."

Blue Ribbon Jury Charges Cancer Caused by Smoking

For various specific diseases, Terry said in a statement, the committee's findings were that cigar and pipe smoking have little significance in comparison with cigarettes.

But while it found much physical menace in smoking, the committee reported that there are benefits in the area of mental health and ease, saying "The habit originates in a search for contentment."

As regards other diseases, the box score of the report ran this way:

1. Cancer of the esophagus — there is evidence of an association with smoking, but cause and effect have not been decided on the basis of present evidence.
2. Cancer of the urinary bladder—an association with cigarette smoking but not enough evidence to establish a cause and effect link.
3. Stomach cancer—no relationship established.
4. Peptic ulcer (including ulcers of the stomach and of the duodenum which links the stomach with the intestines)—an association with cigarette smoking but no cause and effect yet established.
5. Amblyopia, dimness of vision unexplained by any bodily defect—an apparent relationship between this ailment and pipe and cigar smoking — but no cause-and-effect link yet made.
6. Cirrhosis of the liver: — there is increased mortality from this among smokers, but the evidence is not sufficient to establish the cause and effect link.
7. Infant birth weight—women who smoke cigarettes during pregnancy tend to have babies of lower than usual birth weight. But information is lacking on the mechanism by which this decrease in birth rate is produced.

The report said that available evidence suggests the existance of some constitutional differences between smokers and nonsmokers but it is still too meager to permit a conclusion.

As to mortality among cigarette smokers the report declared that one study has shown that the death rate for smokers of cigarettes only is about 70 per cent higher than that for nonsmokers.

"The death rates increase with the amount smoked," the report added.

The report said that in most parts of the nation cigarette smoking contributes to chronic lung and bronchial ailments much more than does air pollution.

Terry told newsmen who were given an hour and a half to study the report before its release that it "has provided us with the most comprehensive compilation and analysis e ver undertaken on the relationship between smoking and health.

Asked when government action of any kind would be taken on the report, Terry replied:

"It would be inappropriate for me to try to say when. But in our (Public Health Service) department this matter is considered of such importance that I do not believe there will be any foot dragging."

In saying that on the basis of the committee's findings he as a doctor would recommend against smoking, Terry said that "in the light of a clear-cut association" between smoking and lung cancer as found by the committee, he would say that if anyone continued to smoke "he should do it with a recognition that he is subjecting himself to a definite health risk."

Pensioners Will Find Additional Dollar in Checks

rent rate of $103 from the state.

Second, the pensioners could receive the $10 spending money they are now receiving, with the they are now receiving, with the additional $1 going to the nursing homes.

Third, the board could determine that the cost of nursing home care has increased by $1, thereby still giving the homes the extra $1, with the pensioners retaining the $10 for personal needs.

Denver attorney James Treece cast the only vote against the pension increase. He based his objections on the fact that there was a discrepancy in the percentages of cost of living increases as expressed in figures from the labor statistics and CU.

The federal figures, he said, show the cost of living index in Colorado at $111.70, while the University of Colorado shows it at $114.62. Increases of $1.45 and $1.62 for the past year were posted by the federal and CU studies respectively.

"Based on the Bureau of Labor Statistics figures, the Colorado pension is already too high," Treece said. He suggested that no action be taken on an increase for six months when another federal survey will be completed.

Frank D. Allen of Akron, another board member, said that the board has "a constitutional amendment which is a mandate for us to review the cost of living index from time to time." He said it has not been reviewed in the past year, but that there has been a rise in the cost of living. He suggested a $1 a month increase in the pension.

Justis noted that both the CU and federal figures show that since the pension was raised a year ago there has been an increase in the cost of living. He, too, recommended that the board use the federal figures and that the pension be reviewed annually.

Member Samuel S. Sherman of Denver said that the federal figures for cost of living should be relied upon "because they are generally accepted."

Local Church Forms a Unicamera

The pastor of the Boulder Street United Presbyterian Church announced Saturday that the Session and board have now been combined, forming a unicamera system, with the Session now having board responsibilities.

The Rev. A. C. Hillegass Jr. said a new constitution had been adopted at the church's annual meeting Friday to take care of this new system.

The pastor also said that reports given show that all the church's organizations are now using Presbyterian material and accomplishing Presbyterian goals.

Six elders were also elected and are Mrs. Elizabeth Elftman, Mrs. Vera Howard, Thomas Owens, L. Merle Taggart, Dean Whigham and J. Zorn.

Mr. and Mrs. Gunnard Ekeland were named treasurers.

The church was formerly First United Presbyterian.

Smoking, Disease Highlights

smokers, average male smokers of cigarettes have apporximately a 9 to 10-fold risk of developing lung cancer and heavy smokers at least a 20-fold risk.

The risk of developing cancer of the lung for pipe smokers, cigar smokers, and pipe and cigar smokers is greater than for non-smokers, but much less than for cigarette smokers.

The causal relationship of the smoking of pipes to the development of cancer of the lip appear to be established.

Cigarette smoking is a significant factor in the causation of laryngeal cancer (cancer of the larynx, or "voice box") in the male.

Cigarette smoking is the most important of the causes of chronic bronchitis in the United States, and increases the risk of dying from chronic bronchitis.

Women who smoke during pregnancy tend to have babies of lower birth weight. It is not known whether this decrease in birth weight has any influence on the biological fitness of the newborn.

A relationship exists between pulmonary emphysema (lowered efficiency of the lungs because of tissue "hardening") and cigarette smoking, but it has not been established that the relationship is causal.

For the bulk of the population of the United States, the importance of cigarette smoking is a cause of chronic bronchopulmonary disease much greater than that of atmospheric polution or occupational diseases.

Among males, cigarette smokers have a greater prevalence of breathlessness than non - smokers. But cigarette smoking does not appear to cause asthma.

The death rate for smokers of cigarettes only, who were smoking at the time of entry into the study, is about 70 per cent higher than that for non-smokers.

The death rates increase with the amount smoked. For groups of men smoking less than 10, 10 to 19, 20 to 39, and 40 cigarettes and over per day, the death rates are about 40 per cent, 70 per cent, 90 per cent, and 120 per cent higher than for non-smokers.

gums. Persons with leukoplakia, small white patches in the mouth, are generally told to quit smoking. There have been some associations with cancer of the bladder, but these are less strong than others.

Emphysema — Often a progressive condition in which the air sacs and small air passages of the lungs become swollen and less efficient. The victim has to work harder to breathe, has difficulty in clearing carbon dioxide and absorbing oxygen. There are a number of causes. The hard work of breathing, sometimes a losing game in advanced patients, can lead to congestive heart failure, when the heart itself becomes worn out and ineffective.

Peptic ulcer—Best information seems to indicate that smoking may prevent the healing in stomach ulcers, but is not believed to cause them.

Buerger's disease—A degenerative process in which the blood flow in the limbs, hands and feet is greatly reduced, sometimes leading to gangrene and ultimately amputation. There are a number of causes, among them excessive smoking.

Toxic amblyopia — Impaired vision due to a poisoning of the optic nerve. There are a number of causative agents, from quinine to alcohol, from excessive smoking to carbon monoxide. Withdrawal of the toxic factor usually leads to improvement and normal vision.

Bronchitis—Smoking has also been associated with the irritation of the bronchial tubes, wheezing and cough, as have other agents and infections. The bronchial passage is lined with small hair-like strands called cilia which act to clear the passage. Some researchers have claimed tobacco smoke retards this action.

Nearly 80 per cent of Communist China's estimated 700 million population still depend on a crude form of agricultural pursuit for a living.

Mothers Often Concerned With Babies' Feet

By THE COLORADO MEDICAL SOCIETY

The human foot is composed of 12 central bones plus 14 toe bones, two main muscles and literally hundreds of ligaments, all put together in a complex double arch system capable of supporting a hundred pounds or more thru a lifetime of standing and walking.

It's scarcely surprising that things sometimes go wrong in such an intricate and delicately balanced mechanism.

Mothers, particularly, are often concerned that their babies have been born with imperfectly formed feet. There are congenital malformations of the feet, of course, but it should be some measure of reassurance to motherhood in general that the most common worry — that baby is flat-footed — seldom has any real basis.

In the first place, about 80 per cent of all babies appear to be flat-footed. A few of these actually will have flat feet, but even among them the possibility of serious foot trouble is minmal. It is the exception rather than he rule, to have flat feet cause any symptoms whatsoever. Some of our best athletes, even some of our best runners, have flat feet.

If the parents ar flat-footed it is quite likey that the child will be, but most children walk at first with flattened and bent-forward feet. It's a matter of balance and stability while they are learning to walk. True flat feet cannot be diagnosed until a baby is a year to 17 months of age, and it obviously is useless to begin any form of treatment until the diagnosis can be made.

Treatment most often consists of a mild and gentle correction to force the child to walk on the outer border of his feet. This is accomplished by placing wedges on the inside of the heel of the shoe. It doesn't require much in most cases.

Usually a wedge only an eighth of an inch think will tilt the foot sufficiently. In some extreeme cases, surgery is undertaken, but almost never before the child is at least 13.

The second most common worry of parents about children's feet is that the baby is pigeon-toed, that his foot turns inward from the midfoot forward. If the condition exists, it ordinarily is noticed very early while the baby is still in the nursery. This condition responds well to casting of the foot.

A closely related condition—twisting of the leg bones so that the foot turns inward — usually is noted when the child starts walking. Commonly, the condition affects both legs, although the torsion in one may be worse. The condition occurs most often in girls and usually needs no treatment. About 98 per cent of the children improve with growth, altho a splinting contraption to hold the feet apart at night sometimes is used.

Duck-foot—feet turned broadly outward—is fortunately a rare condition, since it responds to no known treatment.

Probably the foot condition which causes the most real concern is club-foot, a congenital condition which often is hereditary. Most of these malformations have three elements: the foot is drawn up and elongated out of normal shape, the heel is deformed or misplaced, and the forepart of the foot is turned inward or outward.

The Club-foot condition can assume a great variety of forms, ranging from severe cases to mild ones easily corrected by simple casting. Most club feet will respond to gentle manipulation and corrective casting, although some may require surgery of the bones, tendons or muscles.

A foot which turns sharply upward, toes pointed toward he shins, is a relatively mild conditon which also responds well to gentle treatment. Quite often the mother can undertake this treatment herself merely by adjusting the direction of the feet each time she changes diapers. No mother, however, should attempt any type of foot correction on her baby without the approval of her doctor and his instructions.

Some children have a very high arch, usually accompanied by a broad forefoot, a condition which may be familial. This makes it difficult to wear properly fitted shoes, and the chronic foot strain can be painful. The condition often is treated with arch supports to ease the strain, or with surgery if there is a worsening.

Surgical treatment also is sometimes required to separate bridges between foot bones which should not be linked, a situation known as spastic flat-foot which causes children to walk on the heel with a marked bowing of the legs and pain on the outside of the foot.

Old Doc Experience advises:

1. Mothers should be observant of, but not unduly alarmed by, the appearance of their babies' feet. If something which seems abnormal is noted, it should be reported to the pediatrician or family doctor. He will consult with an orthopedist if special care is needed.

2. No, stretch sox do not contribute to serious foot problems.

3. Even shoes are a minor factor in severe foot problems, although ill-fitted shoes can contribute much to a wide variety of minor problems such as corns bunions, ingrown toenails, calluses, etc.

4. As a general rule, sneakers and tennis shoes are good for young feet. They give the ligaments a cance to develop sturdily, and in the normal foot ligament support is more important than muscular support.

5. Early, or too-early, walking is not a big factor in foot malformation, although it can contribute to bowing of the legs.

6. A child who is too gat often has foot strain problems.

The joy of giving is not only in the form of money but in individual time and effort put forth by hundreds of our citizens.

This is a labor of love and has born fruit in the establishment in El Paso County of a Heart Office which is located at 421 N. Tejon St., Room 210.

This office is open year-round Monday thru Friday from 10:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. for service to the public.

Pamphlets, films for any group, educational programs for Clubs and other Organizations, and general information concerning the benefits and activities of the Heart Association are available by calling Mrs. Dorothea Henderson, Office Secretary, at 635-7688, or by a visit to this office.

School children and teachers will find many leaflets and charts for upper elementary, junior high and senior high students to supplement health unit material, textbook and library resources — free for the asking.

Kilian is presently at Lackland AFB, San Antonio, Tex. Following basic training at that base he will be sent to an Air Force Technical Training School or to a duty assignment for on-the-job training within the Aptitude area for which he enlisted.

He chose this Aptitude area after completing the Air Force Aptitude test, which he took before his departure from home.

Highway Department Lets 112 Road Contracts in '63

In the calendar year 1963, the department placed under contract 112 construction projects covering 778 miles of road work at a total cost of $65,865,355. In addition, 20 preliminary engineering and right of way projects were completed, covering 118 miles of highway at an expenditure of $5,661,080.

Altogether, 132 projects related to 896 miles of highway building were represented in the year's activities and reflected an investment in better roads of $71,526,435.

Nineteen of the contract awards were for more than a million dollars. Five contracts carried a total cost of more than three million dollars each, and three were for more than two million dollars each.

The largest project in terms of total cost, $3,475,316, was that for grading the structures on 3.8 miles of a portion of the west approach road to the Straight Creek tunnel on Interstate 70. Colorado Constructors, Inc., Denver, was the lowest of seven bidders.

The second largest project, with a total cost of $3,462,384, was for grading, structures and concrete paving of 0.7 miles on the East 46th Avenue Freeway on Interstate 70, and went to Peter Kiewit Sons' Co., Denver.

The third highest amount, $3,378,074, was the approximate total cost of grading, structures and concrete paving on 8.7 miles of Interstate 25 north from the Loveland interchange. (Bids on this project were to be opened December 27.)

The next largest project, with a total of $3,121,927, was for grading, structures and concrete paving in connection with the East 46th Avenue Freeway, and went to the Peter Kiewit Sons' Co.

The fifth highest amount, $3,119,235, represented the total cost of grading and structures on 23.7 miles of Interstate 80-S between Brush and Atwood. The successful bidder was the Rissler & McMurray Co. of Casper, Wyoming.

During the year the department completed improvements on 721 miles of the State Highway System at a total cost of $51,097,000.

Awarding of the contract for the pioneer bore marked the start of actual drilling of the ultimate twin, two-lane, one-way tunnels at Straight Creek on Interstate 70. The pioneer tunnel, 10 feet by 10 feet, and 8,282 feet long, is expected to pierce the Continental Divide by the summer of 1964. Contracts already have been awarded for both approach roads.

Marked progress was made on the six-lane, elevated East 46th Avenue Freeway, and the section between the Valley Highway and Colorado Blvd., two miles long, is expected to be completed next summer at a total cost of $12 million. The western section from the Valley Highway to the Coliseum now is in use. Contracts have been awarded to carry the improvement from Colorado Blvd., to Potomac St.

Late in the year, the Colorado Supreme Court cleared the way for construction of Interstate 70 from the Valley Highway west on West 48th Ave. by dismissing a suit which had sought to force the Department and the City of Denver to follow a different route than the one on which agreement had been reached. The Highway Commission promptly alloted $800,000 with which to begin immediate acquisition of right of way, and this action was approved by Governor John A. Love.

The $1,700,000 Lawrence-Larimer connection, linking Denver's downtown district directly with the Valley Highway and the West Colfax viaduct, was opened on Jan. 5, 1963.

The first section on the Interstate System to be completed on the Western Slope was the $3,560,000 improvement between Cameo and Clifton on 9 miles of Interstate 70, which was opened in October and which included the new structure over the Colorado River.

The largest concentration of automated equipment in the history of Colorado road building was assembled by the Western Contracting Corp., Sioux City, Iowa, for the concrete paving of a four-lane, 17-mile section of Interstate 25 from Wellington north to Wyoming line.

The company was the lowest bidder on the project on March 21 with an offer of $2,145,472. The new highway was opened to traffic in December. It was predicted that the automated paving project could revolutionize paving methods on future large projects and result in both increased production efficiency and greater return on the highway tax dollar. The bid price of $2.94 per square yard of concrete pavement was the lowest submitted in recent years for such work on a Colorado Highway.

The top administration of the Department underwent a change in 1963 when Mark U. Watrous retired as chief engineer after more than 17 years in office and was replaced by his deputy, Charles E. Shumate.

Laurence C. Bower, district engineer at Greeley, named to succeed Shumate as deputy chief engineer.

Michael Estes Enlists In U.S. Air Force

Michael Allen Estes, 18 year old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert F. Estes of 128 Doris Dr., Security, recently enlisted in the U. S. Air Force for training in the Administrative Aptitude area.

Estes is presently at Lackland AFB, San Antonio, Tex. Following basic training at that base he will be sent to an Air Force Technical Training School or to a duty assignment for on-the-job training within the Aptitude area for which he enlisted.

Before he enlisted he graduated from Widefield High School, last June.

TB Fund Drive Now Within Reach of Goal

The testing and research fund drive of the El Paso County Tuberculosis Association is within reach of its goal.

"The $25,000 which officers and volunteers of the organization hoped to get is only $1417.56 away," Harold Hawks, Christmas Seal Campaign chairman said, "our hopes are high that residents in the Region will make the full amount a reality."

The funds are used to give TB skin tests to residents without charge, and especially to school children. Hawks pointed out, "a lot goes to help pay for research in finding the causes of all respiratory diseases which continue to damage the health of residents here. Funds are being used in a special effort to delve into the mystery of emphysema - this disease destroys the lungs slowly, without violent attack or warning."

The success of the TB drive for life-saving money belongs to the millions who have been helped and cured, and who will be helped today, tomorrow and in the years to come, Hawks said, and added that a contribution is a permanent investment which will buy information thru research which the medical world can use forever.

Contributions toward the $25,000 TB goal may be sent to the El Paso County Tuberculosis Association, 809 N. Cascade Ave.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY — Col. Robert L. Harriger, commander of the 71st Surveillance Wing (BMEWS) is shown cutting a cake to celebrate the second operational anniversary of the Wing. BMEWS Marks Second Birthday This Month

The 71st Surveillance Wing (BMEWS) celebrates its second birthday this month. Officially born on Jan. 1, 1962, this space age offspring operates the Ballistic Missile Early Warning System (BMEWS) which acts as the Free World's sentinel against a surprise missile attack.

In the short span of two years this unit, headquartered at Colorado Springs, has reached full maturity.

With the recent addition of a third site at Fylingdales Moor, England, BMEWS now blankets the top of the world with a vast radar net.

Under the command of Col. Robert L. Harriger of Oil City, Penn., the 71st Wing is an integral part of the 9th Aerospace Defense Division, the space defense organization.

The wing has three globally separated detachments. Detachment 1, at Thule, Greenland began operating as the first BMEWS site on Oct. 1, 1960. Detachment 2, at Clear, Alaska went on the air on June 30, 1961. The Fylingdales site was added to the system on Sept. 17, 1963.

The newest site took more than three years to complete. Established by joint agreement between the governments of the United States and the United Kingdom, it provides simultaneous missile early warning information to aerospace defense operations centers in the United States, England, and the Supreme Allied Commmander in Europe.

It is operated jointly by USAF and Royal Air Force personnel.

An additional detachment of the 71st Wing, located at Riverton, New Jersey, is responsible for close coordination with the civilian contractor - the Radio Corporation of America. Total cost for the entire BMEWS system was more than one billion dollars.

In addition to its prime mission of missile detection, BMEWS also contributes satellite observation data to the North American Air Defense Command's space-track center which is responsible for track-orbit around the earth. ing all man-made satellites in Satellites passing thru the radar beams are detected. Information is instantly and automatically calculated by the BMEWS computers and sent to their counterparts at the SPADATS - spacetrack center.

Even tho science fiction is daily becoming science fact, future developments will not make the BMEWS system of early warning obsolete. As missile technology progresses, BMEWS is flexible enough to meet the threat, officials say.

Antelope Get New Homes; Sent From Local Area

The Game, Fish, and Parks Department transplanted 121 antelope last week from Chico Basin near Colorado Springs to other areas in Colorado, as part of a continuing management program.

Department officials herded the animals into the quarter mile fenced area by helicopter from distances of a half mile to three miles away. Herds of 43, 32 and 46 were handled in this way.

Once inside the trap area the antelope were patiently walked down a fenced lane that led to a "squeeze pen". From the squeeze pen they were placed in darkened trucks and transported nonstop to release sites near Cortez, Del Norte and La Jara Reservoir.

In addition, 34 animals were released at the Game, Fish and Parks Department's Apishapa Management Area, southeast of Walsenburg.

Antelope arrive none the worse for wear and accept the new area immediately.

Carl R. Welsh, Game and Fish Manager for southeastern Colorado said, "Work of this nature is done on a continuing basis in areas where hunting is not permitted. Growing herds of antelope must be dispersed to relieve serious range food problems. Along with this, transplants of antelope enhance the existing herds at their new home sites."

"In addition, the antelope are placed in areas from which they can be harvested by Colorado sportsmen. The Apishapa Management Area fits this category," stated Clifford Moser, game biologist in charge.

Antelope is one big game species relatively easy to trap and to handle in large numbers, and therefore feasible for transplant. Also, suitable antelope ranges in Colorado are rather widely separated by intervening mountain ranges which necessitates moving by truck over long distances.

Wildlife Conservation Officers Frank Colley and John Stevenson were the officers with the "know how" who chose the site, erected the trap and guided every phase of trapping.

The two men supervised trapping activities two years ago northeast of Colorado Springs, when 69 head were moved to sites in the San Luis Valley, and to southwestern Colorado.

Each animal was fitted with a numbered, metal ear tag for future identification in management-research work. Game Biologist, Cliff Moser pleaded, "We hope sportsmen make an effort to report tagged animals taken during a hunt to the nearest department official or the Game Department's offices."

Representatives from the Cheyenne Mountain Zoo, and the Pueblo City Park Zoo were on hand to receive young stock for replacement of ageing animals.

The Colorado Game, Fish and Parks Department cooperates statewide in public educational programs, and therefore extended the invitation to the zoo mangers.

Henry Teems Dies, Services in Florida

Henry L. Teems, Manitou Springs, died Saturday in a local hospital. Funeral and burial will be at Lakeland, Fla.

Mr. Teems had lived in Manitou Springs for 12 years. He retired from the Army 14 years ago with the rank of sergeant first class after having served 23 years. He was born Dec. 22, 1903 in Georgia.

Survivors include six sisters and one brother.

FAST TIME—Fighting antelope buck is being thrown for the "fast time" of this go-around by Alex Hamilton, Game and Fish official. Don Lengel, right, conservation officer, preferred a horn for his handle.

VALUABLE POULTRY — Bernard and Charlene Hockenberry, children of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Hockenberry of 2722 Willamette Place, were amazed at the number of different breeds of poultry entered in the show. Pikes Peak Range Riders Part of Stock Show

By ROBIN TIBBETS

Farm and Ranch Editor

Members of the Pikes Peak Range Riders, dressed in white chaps and hats, red shirts, white scarves, and flying the green and white flag of the Pikes Peak or Bust Rodeo took part in a brief opening ceremony at the initial performance of the annual National Western Livestock Show rodeo Friday afternoon.

Friday was Colorado Springs and Arkansas Valley day at the Denver show, and several hundred persons from both areas, including over 400 from here, attended the show.

Most of those from Colorado Springs rode to Denver aboard the 11th annual Stock Show Train which also carried about 200 persons from Pueblo and other towns in the Arkansas Valley.

Many of those riding the special train were farmers, ranchers, and stockmen. But there was also a healthy sprinkle of Colorado Springs business and civic leaders, government officials, and plain ordinary citizens who turned the trip into a family outing.

Earlier predictions to the contrary, Friday morning dawned clear and cold, and the weather remained that way thruout most of the day. The return to Colorado Springs, however, was marred by high winds and snow which swept eastward from the mountains.

Upon the arrival of the Stock Show Train in Denver, Jack Foster, of Denver, was presented with a 10-gallon hat and a lighter by Norman Coleman, president-elect of the Colorado Springs Chamber of Commerce. Foster was honored for his support of the Pikes Peak or Bust Rodeo. Mayor Harry Hoth and other members of the City Council and officials of the chamber were on hand for the presentation.

Willard Simms, general manager of the stock show, told the Gazette Telegraph Friday afternoon that he expects this year's event to top all others in importance to the livestock industry. He indicated that first-day crowds foretold a record attendance for the nine-day show which closes Jan. 18. This is Simms' ninth year as general manager.

Between 150,000 and 170,000 persons usually attend the show, including representatives from all the 50 states, as well as a number of persons from as far away as England, Scotland, Mexico, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and sometimes from South American countries.

The nation's top cowboys began competing Friday afternoon for the rodeo purse, with such champions as Guy Weeks, 31, of Abilene, Tex., the saddle bronc riding champ, scheduled to compete. Others include Dean Oliver of Idaho, all - around cowboy titlist, John Hawkins of Twain Harte, Calif., the 1963 world champion barback bronc rider, and Marky Wood of Bowness, Alberta, Canada, second ranking saddle bronc rider last year.

In the girl's barrel racing Friday, Ardith Bruce of Colorado Springs and Fay Ann Horton of Kilgore, Tex., shared top honors. Both rode the cloverleaf course in 16.3 seconds.

Cowboys found themselves confronted by some new rules, posted by officials of the Rodeo Cowboys of America, which gave the advantage to the animal and not to the rider. One rule banned the use of resin in the bronc and bull riding events, the other changed the scoring on which riders are judged.

The new scoring system was so new that even the rodeo announcer on the public address system did not know about it until after the afternoon show was under way. He added to the confusion by announcing initial scores under the old system, then changing to the new system. During a brief intermission, he explained the new system to the audience.

Under the new ruling, the horse and rider share equal billing, as compared to the old under which it was possible for the rider to get as high as 210 points to only 80 for the horse. Under the new rules, the poor rider on a good horse will have less opportunity to come out a top winner.

Upon arriving at the stock show grounds, most of the Colorado Springs visitors went directly to the Coliseum where they toured the various exhibits, bought souvenirs, and provided the youngsters with the usual fare of popcorn, cotton candy, and soft drinks.

Leaving the Coloseum, they drifted over to the rabbit and poultry show to view the hundreds of entries in that division. The next stop was the Children's Ranchland, where exhibits featured baby chickens, burros, and a step-by-step demonstration of the process a baby chicken goes thru in haching from the egg.

The next stop, in many cases, was the Quarter Horse show barn, followed by visits to the Hereford, Aberdeen Angus, Shorthorn and Polled Hereford barns. Others toured the wool and swine barns, before going to the Coliseum for the afternoon performance of the rodeo.

Events scheduled for today include the wool judging contest at the Brown Palace Hotel, 7:30 a.m.; Polled Hereford Sale Cattle, Stadium Arena, 8 a.m.; Angus Sale Cattle, Stadium Arena, 8 a.m.; Hereford Sale Cattle, Stadium Arena, and Rabbit and Poultry Show, 9 a.m.; Shorthorn Sale Cattle, Stadium Arena, 10 a.m.; Southdown Breeding Sheep, Carloads Hereford Senior and Junior Bull Calbes, Angus Pens of Three Bulls, Shorthorn Pens and Carloads of Bulls, and Quarter Horse Mares, all at 1 p.m.

At 5 p.m. today, the Denver Live Stock Exchange and Denver Union Stock Yard Co. will sponsor a banquet for judging teams. The Colorado Hereford Association dinner will be held at 6:30 p.m. at the Aviation Country Club, followed at 7 p.m. by the National Western Polled Hereford Association banquet at the Brown Palace Hotel.

Monday's activities include the judging of Open Class Hereford Steers, judging of Hereford Breeding Cattle, judging of Open Class Wethers, and of Berkshire Breeding Swine, all at 8 a.m.; judging of Duroc Breeding Swine at 9:30 a.m.; Quarter Horse Sale at 10 a.m.; naming of the Grand Champion Steer at 11:30 a.m.

Afternoon activities Monday will include the judging of the following: Carloads Feeder Yearlings, Junior Show Truckloads Fat Lambs, Truckloads and Carloads Fat Lambs, Angus Breeding Cattle, all at 1 p.m.; Galloway sale, 1:30 p.m.; Open Class Barrows and Columbia Breeding Sheep judging at 2 p.m.; Polled Hereford Sale at 5 p.m., and parade of Junior Show Champions at 7:30 p.m.

Police Grab Suspect of Attempted Rape

Colorado Springs police are holding a man, presumably a military serviceman, on suspicion of assault with intent to rape following an attack at 11:45 p.m. Friday involving a Manitou Springs woman.

Police said the woman identified the suspect in a lineup at 1 p.m. Saturday.

According to the police report, the woman was attacked as she was walking west on Kiowa Street near its intersection with Tejon Street. She said she heard someone walking behind her and when she turned around, saw a man following her. She said she kept walking and the man grabbed her and threw her to the ground.

In her statement to the police, the woman said the man told her he was a "GI", and made lewd suggestions to her. She said he put his hand over her mouth, threatening to kill her if she screamed. She said he attempted to force her into a nearby alley, but that she fought him.

At this point, a police prowl car, driven by Lt. Rudy G. Cheetsos, entered Kiowa Street, and the woman said she managed to get the man's hand off her mouth and began screaming for help. The attacker saw the police car and let her go and ran away.

Lt. Cheetsos, who took the woman to the police station, said he thought the two were fighting, and did not know until he talked to the woman that she was being attacked. He said she suffered a scratch under her right eye and bruises on her left cheek. The woman also complained of having a back ache.

The suspect was taken into custody a short time later by police.

Lois Burke Death Due to Injuries, Not Suicide

Mrs. Lois C. Burke, wife of Robert J. Burke, 2434 Lark Dr., died Friday at her home. Her death was not suicide, as stated in a previous report, but caused by sub - dural hematomata (brain hemorrhage), due to an accidental fall, according to an autopsy performed by Dr. Raoul W. Urich, coroner.

Mrs. Burke had been a resident of Colorado Springs but four months. She was a member of Holy Trinity Catholic Church. She was born in Weatherford, Tex., March 12, 1919. She and Mr. Burke were married in Lakawanna, N.Y., in 1946. Besides her husband she is survived by a daughter, Patricia, 15, and a son, Michael, 13, both of Colorado Springs; her mother, Mrs. John R. Chambers, Weatherford, Tex.; a brother, Vacil Chambers, Wilmington, Calif., and a sister, Mrs. Lila Snyder, Weatherford.

Funeral services and burial will be in Weatherford, Tex. The Nolan Funeral Home has charge of arrangements.

Partial Text of Smoking and Health Report

gist of the Committee's findings and conclusions on tobacco and health, and an assessment of the nature and magnitude of the health hazard. Section B presents all formal conclusions adopted by the Committee and selected comments abridged from the detailed summaries that appear in each chapter of Part II of the report. The full scope and depth of the Committee's inquiry may be comprehended only by study of the complete report.

A. Background and Highlights

In previous studies, the use of tobacco, especially cigarette smoking, has been casually linked to several diseases. Such use has been associated with increased deaths from lung cancer and other diseases, notably coronary artery disease, chronic bronchitis, and emphysema.

These widely reported findings, which have been the cause of much public concern over the past decade, have been accepted in many countries by official health agencies, medical associations, and voluntary health organizations.

The potential hazard is great because these diseases are major causes of death and disability. In 1962, over 500,000 people in the United States died of arteriosclerotic heart disease (principally coronary artery disease), 41,000 died of lung cancer, and 15,000 died of bronchitis and emphysema.

The numbers of deaths in some important disease categories that have been reported to have a relationship with tobacco use are shown in Table 1. This table presents one aspect of the size of the potential hazard; the degree of association with the use of tobacco will be discussed later.

Another cause for concern is that deaths from some of these diseases have been increasing with great rapidity over the past few decades.

Lung cancer deaths, less than 3,000 in 1930, increased to 18,000 in 1950. In the short period since 1955, deaths from lung cancer rose from less than 27,000 to the 1962 total of 41,000. This extraordinary rise has not been recorded for cancer of any other site. While part of the rising tend for lung cancer is attributable to improvements in diagnosis and the changing age-composition and size of the population, the evidence leaves little doubt that a true increase in lung cancer has taken place.

Deaths from arteriosclerotic, coronary, and degenerative heart disease rose from 273,000 in 1940, to 396,000 in 1950, and to 578,000 in 1962.

Reported deaths from chronic bronchitis and emphysema rose from 2,300 in 1945 to 15,000 in 1962.

The changing patterns and extent of tobacco use are a pertinent aspect of the tobacco-health problem.

Nearly 70 million people in the United States consume tobacco regularly. Cigarette consumption in the United States has increased markedly since the turn of the century, when per capita consumption was less than 50 cigarettes a year. Since 1910, when cigarette consumption per person (15 years and older) was 138, it rose to 1,365 in 1930, to 1,828 in 1940, to 3,322 in 1950, and to a peak of 3,986 in 1961. The 1955 Current Population Survey showed that 68 per cent of the male population and 32.4 per cent of the female population 18 years of age and regular smokers of trast with this sharp in-use of tobacco in other has gone down. Per capiconsumption of cigars declined from 117 in 1920 to 55 in 1962. Consumption of pipe tobacco, which reached a peak of 2½ lbs. per person in 1910, fell to a little more than half a pound per person in 1962. Use of chewing tobacco has declined from about four pounds per person in 1900 to half a pound in 1962.

The background for the committee's study thus included much general information and findings from previous investigations which associated the increase in cigarette smoking with increased deaths in a number of major disease categories. It was in this setting that the committee began its work to assess the nature and magnitude of the health hazard attributable to smoking.

Kinds of Evidence

In order to judge whether smoking and other tobacco uses are injurious to health or related to specific diseases, the committee evaluated three main kinds of scientific evidence:

1. Animal experiments. — In numerous studies, animals have been exposed to tobacco smoke and tars, and to the various chemical compounds they contain. Seven of these compounds (polycyclic aromatic compounds) have been established as cancer-producing (carcinogenic). Other substances in tobacco and smoke, though not carcinogenic themselves, promote cancer production or lower the threshold to a known carcinogen. Several toxic or irritant gases contained in tobacco smoke produce experimentally the kinds of non-cancerous damage seen in the tissues and cells of heavy smokers. This includes suppression of ciliary action that normally cleanss the trachea and bronchi, damage to the lung air sacs, and to mucous glands and goblet cells which produce mucus.

2. Clinical and autopsy studies. — Observations of thousands of patients and autopsy studies of smokers and non-smokers show that many kinds of damage to body functions and to organs, cells, and tissues occur more frequently and severely in smokers. Three kinds of cellular changes — loss of ciliated cells, thickening (more than two layers of basal cells), and presence of atypical cells — are much more common in the lining layer (epithelium) of the trachea and bronchi of cigarette smokers than of non-smokers. Some of the advanced lesions seen in the bronchi of cigarette smokers are probably premalignant. Cellular changes regularly found with chronic bronchitis are found at autopsy in patients with chronic bronchitis are more often present in the bronchi of smokers than non-smokers. Pathological changes in the air sacs and other functional tissue of the lung (parenchyma) have a remarkably close association with past history of cigarette smoking.

3. Population studies. — Another kind of evidence regarding an association between smoking and disease comes from epidemiological studies.

In retrospective studies, the smoking histories of persons with a specified disease (for example, lung cancer) are compared with those of appropriate control groups without the disease. For lung cancer alone, 29 such retrospective studies have been made in recent years. Despite many variations in design and method, all but one (which dealt with females) showed that proportionately more cigarette smokers are found among the lung cancer patients than in the control populations without lung cancer.

Extensive retrospective studies of the prevalence of specific symptoms and signs — chronic cough, sputum production, breathlessness, chest illness, and decreased lung function — consistently show that these occur more often in cigarette smokers than in non-smokers. Some of these signs and symptoms are the clinical expressions of chronic bronchitis, and some are associated more with emphysema; in general they increase with amount of smoking and decrease after cessation of smoking.

Another type of epidemiological evidence on the relation of smoking and mortality comes from seven prospective studies which have been conducted since 1951. In these studies, large numbers of men answered questions about their smoking or non-smoking habits. Death certificates have been obtained for those who died since entering the studies, permitting total death rates and death rates by cause to be computed for smokers of various types as well as important dimensions to information on the smoking-health problem. Their data permit direct comparisons of the death rates of smokers and non-smokers, both overall and for individual causes of death, and indicate the strength of the association between smoking and specific diseases.

Each of these three lines of evidence was evaluated and then considered together in drawing conclusions. The committee was aware that the mere establishment of a statistical association between the use of tobacco and a disease is not enough. The casual significance of the use of tobacco in relation to the disease is the crucial question. For such judgments all three lines of evidence are essential . . .

In the paragraphs which follow, the committee has chosen to summarize the results of the seven prospective population studies which, as noted above, constitute only one type of evidence. They illustrate the nature and potential magnitude of the smoking-health problem, and bring out a number of factors which are involved.

Results of Prospective Studies

The committee examined the seven prospective studies separately as well as their combined results. Considerable weight was attached to the consistency of findings among the several studies. However, to simplify presentation, only the combined results are highlighted here.

Of the 1,123,000 men who entered the seven prospective studies and who provided usable histories of smoking habits (and other characteristics such as age), 37,391 men died during the subsequent months or years of the studies. No analyses of data for females from prospective studies are presently available.

To permit ready comparison of the mortality experience of smokers and non-smokers, two concepts are widely used in the studies — excess deaths of smokers compared with non-smokers, and mortality ratio. After adjustments for differences in age and the number of cigarette smokers and non-smokers, an expected number of deaths of smokers is derived on the basis of deaths among non-smokers. Excess deaths are thus the number of actual (observed) deaths among smokers in excess of the number expected. The mortality ratio . . . measures the relative death rates of smokers and non-smokers. If the age-adjusted death rates are the same, the mortality ratio will be 1.0; if the death rates of smokers are double those of non-smokers, the mortality ratio will be 2.0. (Expressed as a percentage, this example would be equivalent to a 100 per cent increase.)

Table 2 presents the accumulated and combined data on 14 disease categories for which the mortality ratio of cigarette smokers to non-smokers was 1.5 or greater.

The mortality ratio for male cigarette smokers compared with non-smokers, for all causes of death taken together, is 1.68, representing a total death rate nearly 70 per cent higher than for non-smokers. (This ratio includes death rates for diseases not listed in the table as well as for the 14 disease categories shown.)

In the combined results from the seven studies, the mortality ratio of cigarette smokers over non-smokers was particularly high for a number of diseases: cancer of the lung (10.8), bronchitis and emphysema (6.1), cancer of the larynx (5.4), oral cancer (4.1), cancer of the esophagus (3.4), peptic ulcer (2.8), and the group of other circulatory diseases (2.6). For coronary artery disease the mortality ratio was 1.7.

Expressed in percentage-form, this is equivalent to a statement that for coronary artery disease, the leading cause of death in this country, the death rate is 70 per cent higher for cigarette smokers. For chronic bronchitis and emphysema, which are among the leading causes of severe disability, the death rate for cigarette smokers is 500 per cent higher than for non-smokers. For lung cancer, the most frequent site of cancer in men, the death rate is nearly 1,000 per cent higher.

Table II — Expected and observed deaths for smokers of cigarettes only and mortality ratios in seven prospective studies; underlying cause of death, followed by totals of expected death, observed deaths and mortality ratio:

Cancer of lung	170.3;	1,833;	10.8.
Bronchitis and emphysema	89.5;	546;	6.1.
Cancer of larynx	14.0;	75;	5.4.
Oral cancer	37.0;	152;	4.2.
Cancer of esophagus	33.7;	113;	3.4.
Stomach and duodenal ulcers	105.1;	294;	2.8.

All causes	15,653.9;	23,223;	1.68.

Other Findings of the Prospective Studies

In general, the greater the number of cigarettes smoked daily, the higher the death rate. For men who smoke fewer than 10 cigarettes a day, according to the seven prospective studies, the death rate from all causes is about 40 per cent higher than for non-smokers. For those who smoke from 10 to 19 cigarettes a day, it is about 70 per cent higher than for non-smokers; for those who smoke 20 to 39 a day, 90 per cent higher; and for those who smoke 40 or more, it is 120 per cent higher.

Cigarette smokers who stopped smoking before enrolling in the seven studies have a death rate about 40 per cent higher than non-smokers, as against 70 per cent higher for current cigarette smokers, men who began smoking before age 20 have a substantially higher death rate than those who began after age 25. Compared with non-smokers, the mortality risk of cigarette smokers, after adjustments for differences in age, increases with duration of smoking (number of years), and is higher in those who stopped after age 55 than for those who stopped at an earlier age.

In two studies which recorded the degree of inhalation, the mortality ratio for a given amount of smoking was greater for inhalers than for non-inhalers.

The ratio of the death rates of smokers to that of non-smokers is highest at the earlier ages (40-50) represented in these studies, and declines with increasing age.

Possible relationships of death rates and other forms of tobacco use were also investigated in the seven studies. The death rates for men smoking less than 5 cigars daily, death rates are slightly higher. There is some indication that these higher death rates occur primarily in men who have been smoking more than 30 years and who inhale the smoke to some degree. The death rates for pipe smokers are little if at all higher than for non-smokers, even for men who smoke 10 or more pipefuls a day and for men who have smoked pipes more than 30 years.

Excess Mortality:

Several of the reports previously published on the prospective studies included a table showing the distribution of the excess number of deaths of cigarette smokers among the principal causes of death. The hazard must be measured not only by the mortality ratio of deaths in smokers and non-smokers but also by the importance of a particular disease as a cause of death.

In all seven studies, coronary artery disease is the chief contributor to the excess number of deaths of cigarette smokers over non-smokers, with lung cancer uniformly in second place. For all seven studies combined, coronary artery disease (with a mortality ratio of 1.7) accounts for 45 per cent of the excess deaths among cigarette smokers, whereas lung cancer (with a ratio of 10.8) accounts for 16 per cent.

Some of the other categories of diseases that contribute to the higher death rates for cigarette smokers over non-smokers are diseases of the heart and blood vessels, other than coronary artery disease, 14 per cent; cancer sites other than lung, 8 per cent; and bronchitis and emphysema, 4 per cent.

Since these diseases as a group are responsible for more than 85 per cent of the higher death rate among cigarette smokers, they are of particular interest to public health authorities and the medical profession.

Associations and Causality:

The array of information from the prospective and retrospective studies of smokers and non-smokers clearly establishes an association between cigarette smoking and substantially higher death rates. The mortality ratios in Table 2 provide an approximate index of the relative strength of this association, for all causes of death and for 14 disease categories.

In this inquiry the epidemiologic method was used extensively in the assessment of causal factors in the relationship of smoking to health among human beings upon whom direct experimentation could not be imposed. Clinical, pathological, and experimental evidence was thoroughly considered and often served to suggest an hypothesis or confirm or contradict other findings. When coupled with the other data, results from the epidemiologic studies can provide the basis upon which judgments of causality may be made.

It is recognized that no simple cause-and-effect relationship is likely to exist between a complex product like tobacco smoke and a specific disease in the variable human organism. It is also recognized that often the coexistence of several factors is required for the occurrence of a disease, and that one of the factors may play a determinant role; that is, without it, the other factors (such as genetic susceptibility) seldom lead to the occurrence of the disease.

The Effects of Smoking: Principal Findings:

Cigarette smoking is associated with a 70 per cent increase in the age-specific death rates of males, and to a lesser extent with increased death rates of females. The total number of excess deaths causally related to cigarette smoking in the U.S. population cannot be accurately estimated. In view of the continuing and mounting evidence from many sources, it is the judgment of the committee that cigarette smoking contributes substantially to mortality from certain specific diseases and to the overall death rate.

Lung Cancer:

Cigarette smoking is causally related to lung cancer in men; the magnitude of the effect of cigarette smoking far outweighs all other factors. The data for women, though less extensive, point in the same direction.

The risk of developing lung cancer increases with duration of smoking and the number of cigarettes smoked per day, and is diminished by discontinuing smoking. In comparison with non-smokers, average male smokers of cigarettes have approximately a 7-to-10-fold risk of developing lung cancer and heavy smokers at least a 20-fold risk.

The risk of developing cancer of the lung for the combined group of pipe smokers, cigar smokers, and pipe and cigar smokers is greater than for non-smokers, but much less than for cigarette smokers.

Cigarette smoking is much more important than occupational exposures in the causation of lung cancer in the general population.

Chronic Bronchitis and Emphysema:

Cigarette smoking is the most important of the causes of chronic bronchitis in the United States, and increases the risk of dying from chronic bronchitis and emphysema. A relationship exists between cigarette smoking and emphysema but it has not been established that the relationship is causal. Studies demonstrate that fatalities from this disease are infrequent among non-smokers.

For the bulk of the population of the United States, the relative importance of cigarette smoking as a cause of chronic broncho-pulmonary disease is much greater than atmospheric pollution or occupational exposures.

Cardiovascular Diseases:

It is established that male cigarette smokers have a higher death rate from coronary artery disease than non-smoking males. Although the causative role of cigarette smoking in deaths from coronary disease is not proven, the Committee considers it more prudent from the public health viewpoint to assume that the established association has causative meaning than to suspend judgment until no uncertainty remains.

Although a causal relationship has not been established, higher mortality of cigarette smokers is associated with many other cardiovascular diseases, including miscellaneous circulatory diseases, other heart diseases, hypertensive heart disease, and general arteriosclerosis.

Other Cancer Sites:

Pipe smoking appears to be causally related to lip cancer. Cigarette smoking is a significant factor in the causation of cancer of the larynx. The evidence supports the belief that an association exists between tobacco use and cancer of the esophagus, and between cigarette smoking and cancer of the urinary bladder in men, but the data are not adequate to decide whether these relationships are causal. Data on an association between smoking and cancer of the stomach are contradictory and incomplete.

The Tobacco Habit and Nicotine:

The habitual use of tobacco is related primarily to psychological and social drives, reinforced and perpetuated by the pharmacological actions of nicotine.

Social stimulation appears to play a major role in a young person's early and first experiments with smoking. No scientific evidence supports the popular hypothesis that smoking among adolescents is an expression of rebellion against authority. Individual stress appears to be associated more with fluctuations in the amount of smoking than with the prevalence of smoking. The overwhelming evidence indicates that smoking—its beginning, habituation, and occasional discontinuation—is to a very large extent psychologically and socially determined.

Nicotine is rapidly changed in the body to relatively inactive substances with low toxicity. The chronic toxicity of small doses of nicotine is low in experimental animals. These two facts, when taken in conjunction with the low mortality ratios of pipe and cigar smokers, indicate that the chronic toxicity of nicotine in quantities absorbed from smoking and other methods of tobacco use is very low and probably does not represent an important health hazard.

The significant beneficial effects of smoking occur primarily in the area of mental health, and the habit originates in a search for contentment. Since no means of measuring the quantity of these benefits is apparent, the committee finds no basis for a judgment which would weigh benefits against hazards of smoking as it may apply to the general population.

The Committee's Judgment in Brief:

On the basis of prolonged study and evaluation of many lines of converging evidence, the committee makes the following judgment:

Cigarette smoking is a health hazard of sufficient importance in the United States to warrant appropriate remedial action.

B Comments and Detailed Conclusions:

All conclusions formally adopted by the Committee are presented at the end of this section . . . for convenience of reference. In the interest of conciseness, the documentation and most of the discussion are omitted from this condensation. . . .

Characterization of the Tobacco Habit:

The habitual use of tobacco is related primarily to psychological and social drives, reinforced and perpetuated by the pharmacological actions of nicotine on the central nervous system. Nicotine-free tobacco or other plant materials do not satisfy the needs of those who acquire the tobacco habit.

The tobacco habit should be characterized as an habituation rather than an addiction. Discontinuation of smoking, although possessing the difficulties attendant upon extinction of any conditioned reflex, is accomplished best by reinforcing factors which interrupt the psychogenic drives. Nicotine substitutes or supplementary medications have not been proven to be of major benefit in breaking the habit.

Pathology and Morphology:

Several types of epithelial changes are much more common in the trachea and bronchi of cigarette smokers, with or without lung cancer, than of non-smokers and of patients without lung cancer. . . Extensive atypical changes have been seen most frequently in men who smoked two or more packs of cigarettes a day.

Women cigarette smokers, in general, have the same epithelial changes as men smokers. However, at given levels of cigarette use, women appear to sohw fewer atypical cells than do men. Older men smokers show fewer atypical cells than younger men smokers. Men who smoke either pipes or cigars have more epithelial changes than non-smokers, but have fewer changes than cigarette smokers consuming approximately the same amount of tobacco. Male ex-cigarette smokers have less hyperplasia and fewer atypical cells than current cigarette smokers.

It may be concluded, on the basis of human and experimental evidence, that some of the advanced epithelial hyperplastic lesions with many atypical cells, as seen in the bronchi of cigarette smokers, are probably premalignant . . .

Mortality

The death rate for smokers of cigarettes only, who were smoking at the time of entry into the particular prospective study, is about 70 percent higher than that for non-smokers. The death rates increase with the amount smoked. For groups of men smoking less than 10, 10-19, 20-39, and 40 cigarettes and over per day, respectively, the death rates are about 40 percent, 70 per cent, 90 percent, and 120 percent higher than for non-smokers. The ratio of the death rates of smokers to non-smokers is highest at the earlier ages (40-50) represented in these studies, and declines with increasing age. The same effect appears to hold for the ratio of the death rate of heavy smokers to that of light smokers. In the studies that provided this information, the mortality ratio of cigarette smokers to non-smokers was substantially higher for men who started to smoke under age 20 than for men who started after age 25. The mortality ratio was increased as the number of years of smoking increased. In two studies which recorded the degree of inhalation, the mortality ratio for a given amount of smoking was greater for inhalers than for non-inhalers. Cigarette smokers who had stopped smoking prior to enrollment in the study had mortality ratios about 1.4 as against 1.7 for current cigarette smokers. The mortality ratio of ex-cigarette smokers increased with the number of years of smoking and was higher for those who stopped after age 55 than for those who stopped at an earlier age.

The biases from non-response and from errors of measurement that are difficult to avoid in mass studies may have resulted in some over-estimation of the true mortality ratios for the complete populations. In our judgement, however, such biases can account for only a part of the elevation in mortality ratios found for cigarette smokers.

For cigar and pipe smokers combined, there was a suggestion of high mortality ratios for cancers of the mouth, esophagus, larynx and lung, and for stomach and duodenal ulcers. These ratios are, however, based on small numbers of deaths.

Cancer by Site

Lung Cancer

Cigarette smoking is causally related to lung cancer in men; the magnitude of the effect of cigarette smoke far outweighs all other factors. The data for women, though less extensive, point in the same direction.

The risk of developing lung cancer increases with duration of smoking and the number of cigarettes smoked per day, and is diminished by discontinuing smoking.

The risk of developing cancer of the lung for the combined group of pipe smokers, cigar smokers, and pipe and cigar smokers, is greater than for non-smokers, but much less than for cigarette smokers. The data are insufficient to warrant a conclusion for each group individually.

Oral Cancer

The causal relationship of the smoking of pipes to the development of cancer of the lip appears to be established.

Although there are suggestions of relationships between cancer of other specific sites of the oral cavity and the several forms of tobacco use, their causal implications cannot at present be stated.

Cancer of the Larynx

Evaluation of the evidence leads to the judgment that cigarette smoking is a significant factor in the causation of laryngeal cancer in the male.

Cancer of the Esophagus

The evidence on the tobacco-esophageal cancer relationship supports the belief that an association exists. However, the data are not adequate to decide whether the relationship is causal.

Cancer of the Urinary Bladder

Available data suggest an association between cigarette smoking and urinary bladder cancer in the male but are not sufficient to support a judgment on the causal significance of this association.

Stomach Cancer

No relationship has been established between tobacco use and stomach cancer.

Non-Neoplastic Respiratory Diseases, Particularly Chronic Bronchitis and Pulmonary Emphysema

Cigarette smoking is the most important of the causes of chronic bronchitis in the United States, and increases the risk of dying from chronic bronchitis.

A relationship exists between pulmonary emphysema and cigarette smoking but it has not been established that the relationship is causal. The smoking of cigarettes is associated with an increased risk of dying from pulmonary emphysema.

For the bulk of the population of the United States, the importance of cigarette smoking as a cause of chronic bronchopulmonary disease is much greater than that of atmospheric pollution or occupation exposures

Cough, sputum production, or the two combined are consistently more frequent among cigarette smokers than among non-smokers.

Cigarette smoking is associated with a reduction in ventilatory function. Among males, cigarette smokers have a greater prevalence of breathlessness than non-smokers.

Cigarette smoking does not appear to cause asthma.

Although death certification shows that cigarette smokers have a moderately increased risk of death from influenza and pneumonia, an association of cigarette smoking and infectious diseases is not otherwise substantiated.

Smoking and nicotine administration cause acute cardiovascular effects similar to those induced by stimulation of the autonomic nervous system,, but these effects do not account well for the observed association between cigarette smoking and coronary disease. It is established that male cigarette smokers have a higher death rate from coronary disease than non-smoking males. The association of smoking with other cardiovascular disorders is less well established. If cigarette smoking actually caused the higher death rate from coronary disease, it would on this account be responsible for many deaths of middle-aged and elderly males in the United States. Other factors such as high blood pressure, high serum cholesterol, and excessive obesity are also known to be associated with an unusually high death rate from coronary disease. The causative role of these factors in coronary disease, though not proven, is suspected strongly enough to be a major reason for taking countermeasures against them. It is also more prudent to assume that the established association between cigarette smoking and coronary disease has causative meaning than to suspend judgment until no uncertainty remains.

Male cigarette smokers have a higher death rate from coronary artery disease than non-smoking males, but it is not clear that the association has causal significance.

Other conditions:

Peptic Ulcer

Epidemiological studies indicate an association between cigarette smoking and peptic ulcer which is greater for gastric than for duodenal ulcer.

Tobacco amblyopia

Tobacco amblyopia dimness of vision unexplained by an organic lesion) has been related to pipe and cigar smoking by clinical impressions. The association has not been substantiated by epidemiological or experimental studies.

Cirrhosis of the Liver

Increased mortality of smokers from cirrhosis of the liver has been shown in the prospective studies. The data are not sufficient to support a direct or causal association.

Maternal Smoking and Infant Birth Weight

Women who smoke cigarettes during pregnancy tend to have babies of lower birth weight.

Information is lacking on the mechanism by which this decrease in birth weight is produced.

It is not known whether this decrease in birth weight has any influence on the biological fitness of the newborn.

Smoking and Accidents

Smoking is associated with accidental deaths from fires in the home.

No conclusive information is available on the effects of smoking on traffic accidents.

Morphological Constitution of Smokers:

The available evidence suggests the existence of some morphological differences between smokers and non-smokers, but is too meager to permit a conclusion.

Psycho-Social Aspects of Smoking:

A clear cut smoker's personality has not emerged from the results so far published. While smokers differ from non-smokers in a variety of characteristics, none of the studies has shown a single variable which is found solely in one group and is completely absent in another. Nor has any single variable been verified in a sufficiently large proportion of smokers and in sufficiently few non-smokers to consider it an "essential" aspect of smoking.

The overwhelming evidence points to the conclusion that smoking—its beginning, habituation, and occasional discontinuation— is to a large extent psychologically and socially determined. This does not rule out physiological factors, especially in respect to habituation, nor the existence of predisposing constitutional or hereditary factors.

DR. GERALD WENDT

Science Editor Guest of Knife And Fork Club

A scientist of international distinction, and probably the best informed scientiifc writer in the United States Dr. Gerald Wendt — erstwhile editor of "Science Illustrated" and author of many volumes of which "You and the Atom", has been published in 14 languages — will be the guest speaker at the next dinner of the Knife & Fork Club.

According to John C. Young, the local president who is in charge of the meeting, the affair will be held at The Antlers Hotel on Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock.

Altho he has scientific honors enough to satisfy several men, Dr. Wendt, who is as common as an old shoe, prefers being called "Jerry" by those he claims as friends.

He is a modest and an altogether charming gentleman; suave, debonair and highly polished. Except for his clothing which is modern and conservative and the fact that no periwig hides his becoming gray hair, he might have been a French Ambassador to the Court of St. James during the days of the 'Sun King", authorities report.

Among other things, he has a delightful sense of humor, and as one listens to him one has the feeling that Jerry Wendt takes nothing too seriously, least of all himself.

Dr. Wendt has long been a speaker much in demand in the Associated Clubs for the past decade.

Ambassador Will Head Visitor List at AFA

Sir David Ormsby-Gore, British ambassador to the U.S., will head the list of visitors to the Air Force Academy during January.

The ambassador is scheduled for the Academy briefing and a tour of academic area facilities Jan. 23. He will be welcomed by the Superintendent, Maj. Gen. Robert H. Warren.

Maj. Gen. C. B. Ware, commandant of the Canadian War College, will head a group of faculty and staff members from the institution visiting the Academy Jan. 28.

The Canadians will be welcomed by the Superintendent, receive a tour and briefing, and dine in Mitchell Hall, cadet dining hall.

On Jan. 15, Army Chief of Staff Gen. Earle G. Wheeler is scheduled for a short tour and briefing.

The Hon. William S. Richardson, lieutenant governor of Hawaii, and other officials from the 7th Civil Defense Region, will tour Wednesday.

Maj. C. J. Arpke Scheduled to Get Air Medal

The officer who played a major role in establishing the Air Force Rocket Propulsion Laboratory at Edwards AFB, Calif., as an authoritative world-wide source for chemical and materials data on rocket propellants will receive the Commendation Medal for his efforts.

Maj. C. J. Arpke, now assigned to the Air Force Academy's Frank J. Seiler Research Laboratory, will be cited for meritorious service as deputy chief of the Chemical and Materials Branch of the Rocket Propulsion Lab from September 1961 to September 1963.

The major's highly successful efforts to recruit scientific personnel did much to enhance the capability, prestige, and stature of the Edwards lab.

He also expedited equipping the facility with the latest and most modern chemical analysis tools.

COLORADO SPRINGS
GAZETTE TELEGRAPH
Your Freedom Newspaper
Ever striving for the Pikes Peak Region to be an even better place to live

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government. Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is self-control, no more, no less. It must be consistent with the truths expressed in such great moral guides as the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence.

The Problem of Conservation

We have recently run across this paragraph which appears in a journal of conservative persuasion:

'Water is so important in life that its conservation and distribution must override the geographical boundaries of private property, counties and provinces; the political boundaries of federal and provincial jurisdictions, and the economic domains of agriculture, forestry and industry. If jurisdictional disputes prevent effective action, our heritage will be lost by default, because above all boundaries is the supreme natural law whose edicts are indisputable."

If there was ever a well worded plea for international governmental control of natural resources, beginning with water, this surely is it. And there is much merit in what has been said.

It is true that water is absolutely vital insofar as life on this planet is concerned. It is also true that we are all subject to supreme natural law whose "edicts are indisputable."

But it is not true that a recognition of these two facts grants to any government now in existence or any government that could be created, rights beyond those held by individuals. Quite frankly, we see in the situation in which we find ourselves, as high-lighted by this statement, the very cause of the problems in conservation of natural resources which are deplored.

What we see, if we but take the trouble to see, is that from the beginning of white man occupancy of this nation, we have failed to recognize the natural laws of human ownership as a private and individual right. Thus, our resources such as water, forests, mines, minerals and so on, have suffered great erosion.

The theory implicit in the quotation we have used is that only the government is wise enough to prevent depletion of our natural resources.

But wait.

In the United States, the government provides almost all the water we use in our cities and much that is used in less populous areas. The government possesses more than 72 per cent of all forest lands in this country (in Canada the government holds 90 per cent of all forests). Many lumbermen in North America actually do not own the forests they cut. They operate on timber leases and are under contract to cut off so much timber during the term of the lease. At the termination of the lease, their "rights" to cut timber expire.

Thus, it turns out that government, supposedly such an admirable watchdog over our resources IS the watchdog over our resources. At least it is standing guard over our water supplies and our forests. Then why are we nearing what some conservationists call a "crisis?" If government can be relied upon, either in small or in great matters, then we have exactly what the experts say we must have: government control and management of our resources.

True, the management and control of the resources is not total. There are pockets of private ownership of water and forest land. But does the problem we face as a nation and as a people arise from that small segment which is privately owned and managed, or from the large segement that is governmentally owned and managed? Examination reveals what logic suggests. The problem doesn't come from private management, it comes because there is so little private management.

To conserve our resources correctly we should begin getting "public" lands and "public" water supplies into the hands of private persons who will have every possible human motivation to look after them correctly. Our natural resources should no longer be turned into political footballs for the setting up of vast bureaucracies which deplete our resources and operate with patronage and privilege.

Ownership

Boundaries are always coexistent with private ownership. Community property has a general boundary, but access for use or disposition of community property is always in dispute. Private ownership is always superior to the claim of community ownership.

The Real 'Forgotten Man'

Remember a few years back when the professional bleeding hearts and politicians were crying over the fate of the "forgotten man," who presumably was some poor character who needed the government to protect him?

One of our readers has sent us a copy of the original "The Forgotten Man" by William Graham Sumner, a Yale educator, economist and social scientist, who died in 1910.

We'd forgotten it, but think it's so good it is worth repeating. Here is "The Forgotten Man":

"The Forgotten Man" is that individual who does an honest day's work, pays his bills, brings up three or four children, indulges himself in a pipe or an occasional cigar, keeps up a small savings account, never asks for charity from anyone, never gets into trouble with the police, never makes a speech or writes a letter to the editor — in short he's the individual who keeps going on his own momentum, good times, bad times, or indifferent times.

When the hat is passed around for the down-and-outers the forgotten man chips in his mite.

The tax gathered visits The Forgotten Man regularly, and collects toll for the upkeep of the police courts, jails, workhouses and poorhouses — none of which The Forgotten Man ever uses.

Hundreds of social agencies exist for the improvement of the human race, but The Forgotten Man is never included in their surveys.

He is self supporting, self starting, self sufficient, and being so he is counted in on nothing except the census.

But in that document he cuts a big figure because he probably forms the vast majority.

The Forgotten Man is just the everyday, common, ordinary plain citizen who does the best he can and makes a pretty good job of it.

He's the man you can count on in times of war or in times of peace, in times of hysterical prosperity or in times of gloomy depression; in times of Republican management or in times of Democratic management.

He's a dependable old horse—broken to harness and he'll stand without hitching.

Remember there are millions of him, and there isn't much chance that he will ever go crazy even tho the whole world about him does seem inclined that way.

When things get too bad he'll take a hand at running them himself, and you can depend upon him to do it in a sensible way.

Wit and Whimsy

We hear they've brought out a new drink called foreignade. It's refreshment that never pauses.

Wise sayings may fall on barren ground, but a kind word is never cast aside.

The Greensboro, N.C., safety sign read: "School — Go Slow — Don't Kill a Child."

Beaneath it was written in a childish scrawl: "Wait for a teacher."

To The Point

'The Pawnbroker'

By RUSSELL KIRK

The film industry still reels from the terrible blow dealt to it by the rise of television. Movie-houses continue to close; shabby studios subsist by producing films too indecent to show on television; and the big companies derive their bread-and-butter from filming television performances.

So it takes courage to embark upon new film ventures—especially if one wants to produce anything worthy of the mind or the conscience. Yet a New York concern, the Landau Company, has commenced making serious pictures and is even buying up theaters in which to show them.

Recently I attended the filming of a Landau production. "The Pawnbroker," based on the novel of Spanish Harlem by the late Edward Lewis Wallant. It is being produced in an old New York warehouse. Its stars are Mr. Rod Steiger and Miss Geraldine Fitzgerald; and Mr. Steiger very kindly took me to lunch, after I had witnessed the final filming of one scene.

The first requisite for making a good picture is to find actors like Mr. Steiger and Miss Fitzgerald, who have principles, imagination, and high talent. In order to turn out a movie worth seeing, the dedicated star may accept a cut in his pay and even invest in the enterprise. Many Hollywood "personalities" are hollow shells, created by the arts of public relations, quite incapable of the art of the theater. But not so Mr. Steiger and Miss Fitzgerald.

I first saw Miss Fitzgerald, years ago, in the English film "The Mill on the Floss" — she playing Maggie Tulliver. She is no less lively, handsome, and skillful now than then. In "The Pawnbroker," she is Mariyn Birchfield, the energetic welfare worker.

Mr. Steiger first came to the attention of many people thru his strong role of the labor-racketeers' bookkeeper in "On the Waterfront." He looks rather similar as Sol Nazerman, the Harlem pawnbroker who has survived the concentration camps, in this new movie; but really he is a most versatile actor, with a wide and sound understanding of the drama, and full of shrewd and telling observations. He is just back from making a film in Rome — where he played a corrupt and avaricious Neapolitan official.

"The Pawnbroker" is a far cry from either the fatuous cheerfulness or the pseudo-sexy "naturalism" of most movies nowadays. Its theme is the revival of a man's heart and conscience, after terrible suffering, amid the corruptions and violence of the slums. It characters — except, perhaps, for the almost institutional or conventional "virtuous prostitute" with a heart of gold — are genuine. And the people who act in, and produce, this rather courageous film are equally genuine.

No, "The Pawnbroker" won't be quite the cup of tea for the representative audience of the drive-in passion-pits. But I think this film will awake a real response among those Amerçans who had almost despaired of the movies as catalyst of real emotion and real thought.

Question Box

(We invite questions on economics and the proper functions of government which will not injure anyone.)

Question No. 410: "How do high corporation taxes retard the growth of small corporations and favor the larger corporations?"

Answer: It is true that the small corporations, up to $25,000 have a lower tax rate than the larger corporations.

The reason the high corporation taxes hurt the small corporations is that the large corporations have good credit and they can make satisfactory loans instead of selling common or preferred stock on which they have to pay taxes before they are able to pay any dividends. The larger corporations with good credit can borrow from the insurance companies or banks and deduct the interest on these loans and thus do not have to pay taxes on part of their capital.

It is a great advantage for the big corporations that have almost unlimited credit to have a big part of their investments in loans on which they can deduct the interest paid, while the smaller corporations have to issue preferred stock or common stock and have to pay taxes on any earnings they have before dividends can be paid.

So high corporation taxes retard the growth of small businesses and help the bigger corporations get bigger because of this advantage. There should not be any law that favors the big organizations or the small organizations. All men should be equal before the law unless we have a government of men rather than a government of eternal natural laws.

A government of eternal universal natural laws where each man is responsible for his own acts and who reaps that he sows is the kind of a society that permits the production to go up and when this production goes up the standard of living also goes up.

Questions are limited to general human relations questions that will improve the well-being of all mankind on this earth.

Allen-Scott Report

Humphrey Touted For Veep

ROBERT ALLEN

PAUL SCOTT

WASHINGTON — The already busily boiling Democratic vice presidential kettle is being further steamed up by a coup by Senator Hubert Humphrey.

The voluble Minnesotan is to be the recipient of the 1964 award of the Four Freedoms Foundation "for distinguished service in the cause of freedom." It will be presented to the Senate Democratic whip at a big dinner in New York City, at a date still to be agreed on.

For Humphrey, the prestigious Four Freedoms award is a fortuitous break in the vice presidential scramble in which he is an unabashed eager aspirant.

In addition to affording him an imposing forum to make a well-publicized address before some 1,500 liberal, labor and other leaders, the award also places him in eminent political company.

Others who have received this award include former President Truman; the late Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt; the late General George Marshall, World War II chief of staff; Undersecretary of State Averell Harriman; Henry Cabot Lodge, ambassador to South Vietnam and 1960 Republican vice presidential candidate; AFL - CIO President George Meany, and Dr. Ralph Bunche, top U.N. official.

Another recipient was then-Vice President Lyndon Johnson — who was formally designated for the 1963 award, but mysteriously never got around to setting a date to accept it.

This curious backstage hassle has never been clarified.

STRANGE INTERLUDE

Early in the fall of 1962, Johnson agreed to accept the Four Freedoms award, and the foundation, headed by former Judge Ferdinand Pecora, famed for his bare-knuckle probing of Wall Street in the early days of the New Deal, made preparations for an elaborate presentation dinner.

But as this column exclusively disclosed, Johnson repeatedly stalled on approving a date. At various times, he pleaded the long session of Congress, the grim Cuban missile crisis, a trip abroad and other excuses.

Finally, when foundation officials submitted three dates and insisted on a definite answer, Johnson's press aide sent regrets and asserted he was too busy.

Jarred by this strange brushoff, the foundation withdrew the award and none was presented last year. Privately, officials have since made no secret of their indignation at Johnson.

Senator Humphrey is responding very differently.

When the award was tendered by long-distance phone during the Christmas holidays, he accepted instantly and confirmed that in telegrams to foundation officials. He told them, "I gratefully accept this honor and will contact you in early January to confirm date for New York dinner."

Obviously Humphrey feels that accepting this notable liberal award — which Johnson ducked after agreeing to take it — won't hurt his prospects to be Johnson's running mate.

The Four Freedoms Foundation, organized in 1951 to "perpetuate the ideals of the four freedoms of President Franklin D. Roosevelt," distributes literature in schools, sponsors essay contests, and present an annual award to a nationally-known leader.

POLITICALS

William Green III, son of the late representative and Philadelphia Democratic boss, may run for his father's seat. Young Green, 25, is a senior law student at Villanova, and has assurances of backing from a number of his father's top lieutenants. . .HEW Secretary Anthony Celebrezze, former mayor of Cleveland, apparently is very enthusiastic about Washington's razzle-dazzle social whirl. He and his wife attend more parties than any other Cabinet member. No far behind are Postmaster General and Mrs. Gronouski — like Celebrezze, appointed in 1963. . . .

The inside word is circulating among California Democratic politicos that the new "man to see" for White House jobs and others reasons is Lloyd Hand, young Texas lawyer who lives in Bel Air, ritzy suburb of Los Angeles. Hand moved there three years ago as representative of Houston insurance interests. A former assistant of Johnson, Hand is in close touch with the new President. Hand also is close to Democratic State Chairman Eugene Wyman and Governor Pat Brown, both of whom are quietly grooming Hand for Congress or some other high office. Hand is staying in the background, but readily admits, "I'm glad to do whatever I can to serve the President." . . .Partisans of Senator Hubert Humphrey are urging his Minnesota colleague, Senator Eugene McCarthy, to publicly disavow having presidential aspirations, but to no avail so far. McCarthy, up for re-election this year, contends, "If I make any statement on the vice presidency, it would imply I am seeking the nomination. So I figure the best thing to do is to say nothing."

GOP POLITICALS

Former Vice President Nixon is quietly organizing a research staff to keep him abreast of domestic and foreign developments. Several hold-overs from the Eisenhower administration working in the Pentagon have been offered jobs by Nixon with salaries up to $30,000. So far there have been no takers. . . Governor Nelson Rockefeller is having second thoughts about entering the May 5 District of Columbia and May 19 Maryland primaries. His private polls show him running poorly in both . . .Washington partisans of Senator Barry Goldwater are very emphatic a slate of delegates will be entered under his banner in the district. They are confident he can sweep it, pointing out that the late Senator Robert Taft carried the capital by a big margin in an informal 1952 primary. . .

Former President Eisenhower is speaking in Detroit as part of the 40-city Republican $100-a-plate fund-raising dinner at the personal request of Governor George Romney. National Chairman William Miller planned to have Eisenhower appear in Los Angeles, but Romney telephoned the latter and persuaded him as a personal favor to come to Detroit. Romney thereupon had himself slated as the Washington speaker. Miller was miffed, but had to go along with the changes. . .Governor William Scranton thinks it's very possible the Republican vice presidential candidate may be a woman. The Pennsylvanian told a group of GOP women leaders, "There isn't any reason why a woman shouldn't be the party's running mate. Women have served successfully as governors, senators and heads of state in other countries. So I see no reason why a woman can't be vice president."

The statements and opinions expressed in this column are those of the contributors and do not necessarily express opinions or convictions held by this newspaper. Letters will not be published without the name and address of the writer. Letters must be received at least two days before publication.

LETTERS TO EDITORS

To the Editor:

Following is a copy of my letter to the editor of the "Voice of the People" column of the Free Press which is self-explanatory, except for a postscript on the original mailed to him which read, "I hope you receive this in time for next Sunday's edition."

It has never appeared, and I think the reasons are obvious. I would like to have it printed not only for the ideas expressed, but to prove the prejudice of that organization and their unwillingness to print anything contrary to their own pet prejudices.

To the Editor
The Free Press:

A few days ago there appeared in your "Voice of the People" column a letter from a young woman complaining about "the other paper," indulging in invective and name-calling, which brought forth a letter from a gentleman here in town complimenting her. (See editor's note.) There are people like these in practically any part of the world one can reach, I suppose. It is writings and utterances like these that the "Lee Oswalds" thrive on, gaining from them the courage to take the action over which they have been brooding. Such writers and speakers (who indulge in invective and name-calling) are their own worst enemies, rather than the ones they accuse of being "enemies" of society.

There are so many of these who either are unable to reason or else have their pet peeves and opinions and do not wish to reason for fear of losing them, that one wonders how we manage to make the progress that we do. The writer has been in the Springs for fourteen years and has been both amused and disgusted by much that he has read in the papers, as time permitted. He has visited the Freedom School on several different occasions. (After reading the letters, columns, and reports of speeches in opposition to the proposed Rampart College, the individuals and groups opposing it convinced him that not only is such an institution needed, but that the sponsors were a little slow in getting it under way!)

Having no financial interest in either the "other paper" or in the school or proposed college, perhaps the following remarks may be accepted as objective and impartial.

First: The things that have put Colorado Springs in a bad light with those from other parts of the country are the public utterances of derogatory remarks concerning the Freedom School and the Rampart College and its sponsors and supporters, and the name-calling diatribes published.

Second: Having read reports of these utterances, and most of the letters "to the editor" NO FACTUAL CRITICISM of the "afternoon newspaper" nor of the Freedom School and Rampart College has been noted—that is, NO criticism that can be substantiated by FACTS proving that either one of them is in the wrong, or a detriment to community, state or national well-being.

Third: The diatribes and name-calling seemed to pertain solely to the speaker's or writer's misconceptions of what the newspaper publisher and editor, and the management of the school stand for and what they both are trying to accomplish.

Fourth: The "afternoon newspaper" and the Freedom School and the proposed Rampart College are trying to make us understand what has been going on TO OUR DETRIMENT by attempting to make us understand WHY, that remedial action needed can be understood — and all this requires careful, step-by-step analytical reasoning. There is a REASON FOR and REASON BEHIND every statement which the editor of that paper makes, and which are made by the various guest speakers and instructors at the school.

Fifth: The reaction here in the Springs to those who would awaken us from our lethargy as evidenced by some speakers, and writers "to the editor," prove St. Paul's contention that "some can take strong meat, while others can take only milk." It is only natural that the latter will advertise their inability or unwillingness to grasp the ideas given expression by the aforementioned paper and school — ideas which may be found in a number of books and publications authored by very keen minds who desire the greatest welfare of our country (which means the individual welfare thru individual freedom and equality before the law) and know that genuine welfare and progress can be realized ONLY as each one understands the basic principles of a free economy and individual rights thru a minimum of government, followed by a perception of the infringements (no matter how thickly sugar-coated in an attempt to make them palatable) which are weakening our economy and taking away our individual rights by an insidious but constant increase in centralized government toward a totalitarian finale. (Those guilty of vituperation against those who would save us from present detrimental tendencies have put themselves in the same class as the "man possessed of many devils" who did not want to be helped, shouting, "What have I to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth?")

If I am not mistaken, the "key" to our problem is in the Declaration of Independence wherein it is stated, "governments are instituted by men." Note the plurality. Being set up by men, they are imperfect attempts to substitute "government by God" — which is in the singular, just ONE. No matter how high the ideals, man-made governments are subject to all sorts of faults and pitfalls because ALL KINDS OF MEN are involved — men who are so apt to forsake PRINCIPLE for WHIM, for VOTES from a constituency swayed by emotion or for self-aggrandizement. Hence, man-made governments require CONSTANT surveiliance and criticism by the governed if they are not to become topheavy and oppressive, messing up the economy as well as the private affairs of the governed.

Personally I admire anyone who "calls a spade a spade" and when there is skullduggery, uncovers it. While most of us have been asleep there has been either insidious brain-washing in our public schools, or a deliberate withholding of instruction in the principles of our free economy and representative republic — LIMITED — type government. I note with pleasure that because of the criticism in our leading magazines as well as in the Freedom Newspapers our REAL educators have become encouraged to speak out and to take action so that the youngsters of today in many areas will again be taught the principles expressed by our Founding Fathers which have been the basis of our success and progress, and must continue to be the basis if we are not to be "buried" by communism.

It is understandable when some of the "middle generation" who were schooled during the "dark era" of socialist influence in our schools, cry out when the principles of free enterprise, individual rights and limited government are espoused. These things are beyond their comprehension. They are strange, foreign to their schooling, and it is primitive human nature to hate that which one does not understand.

Is it not much smarter to study the writings and utterances of others to see if they make sense and prove themselves to be facts, than to scream for the destruction of the writings and gagging of the speakers, wasting time and energy in name-calling? If the writings or utterances prove to be false and misleading then, because of the thought given to them, one can give logical refutation to the writings, silence the speaker and thus make name-calling superfluous.

I am wondering if any of the complaining critics ever thought that it might be possible the Freedom Newspapers in uncovering the faults and weaknesses of man-made governments hope to stimulate thought to where "government by God" will be instituted in the only way possible — voluntarily in the "heart" (consciousness) of each individual by his accepting his individual responsibility for his behavior, this self-government gradually taking the place of man-made (political) government to its ultimate complete replacement in a future no one knows how distant.

Now, in "reverse" could they be attempting to show us that by our shirking our individual responsibilities of individual self-government, our man-made government is growing bigger and bigger, more costly and smothering initiative and ambition — a Tower of Babel of Bureaus, Regulations and Deficits?

Think on these things, my friend, before opening your mouth and perhaps putting your foot in it!

JOBS

To the Editor:

We have five or six million men unemployed in America. We taxpayers must pay most of these idle men $30 — more or less — each week until they can locate a high-paying job. Meanwhile, the want ads in the dailies offer employment for twice as many idlers. Productive industry pays for these ads because they have work that needs to be done. A surplus of unfilled jobs and an army of idlers cannot exist simultaneously in a land of free enterprise. If we could change our socialist rules to free enterprise overnight, industry would employ every idler within 24 hours, using the money that socialist government taxes from us.

Florida absorbs the thousands of Cuban refugees by giving them a dole of about $50 for one month, allowing them to work for anyone that will hire them, and permitting employers to hire anyone willing to work for the wage offered.

West Germany takes care of the host of refugees from East Germany in a similar fashion. Japan handles newly idled men by allowing them to work for anyone who will hire them. In brief, government controls cause unemployment; free enterprise cures it.

Here is the modus oprandi of socialist management. It borrows money from the people by selling bonds bearing 3 per cent interest, then lends these monies to foreign governments at 2 per cent, without security.

Presiden Johnson asks employers to make a lot more jobs but does not suggest how it is to be done. Secretary of Labor Wirtz thinks jobs might be created by increasing the rates for overtime! He gets this idea from labor bosses, who do not know how jobs are made, anyhow. He could get more dependable advice from employers who always have work to be done and need personnel to perform tasks.

Employers are always happy to pay increased wages for more or better production, but resent being forced to pay for idle time. Forcing wages up without improving quality or increasing amount of production or services, automatically increases unemployment. Increasing production per hour or lowering wages per hour always increases employment.

SINK THE PORK BARREL!

To the Editor:

An S.O.S. is addressed to all senators and congressmen on behalf of locally plucked taxpayers who are about to be rewrung by Internal Revenue Service. We are well aware of the inescapable burden of holding the freedom line against the red tide. The promised tax cut is possible only if all political pork barrels, superimposed on this burden, are eliminated.

Victims of exorbitant taxation are emerging from economic kindergarten in which economy is advocated for everyone else's district to let the pie in the sky political pork barrel roll in our own. Waterways, proposed or building, on Missouri, Ohio, Kansas, Arkansas and Trinity Rivers are wasteful excess transportation pork. If such are just make-work, WPA leaf raking would be less harmful. The areas involved are served by more than adequate land transportation.

Barge operators arrogantly refuse to repay cost of waterways or to assume maintenance thereof. In addition, they demand ICC umbrella rate protection from competition by self-reliant railroads. Let us sink the indefensible waterway pork barrel!

The Road to Despotism

By JOHN C. SATTERFIELD
Past President (1961-62) of the American Bar Association

The Civil Rights bill is aimed — so its advocates tell us — at abolishing discrimination.

That being so, it seems the first step toward achieving this end should be to define the word.

What is "discrimination? The bill doesn't tell us.

It is customary — indeed, mandatory, if legislation is to make sense — to spell out such key words. Even the civil-rights bill, itself, follows this needed custom — in all but this single instance. It does so, thruout, all along the line.

Why, then the question comes, is there no definition of "discrimination," the base word of the whole civil-rights package? Why is "discrimination" nowhere defined in the bill?

The most realistic answer seems apparent:

It is impossible to define discrimination without, by the very definition, becoming invidiously discriminatory; you can't define discrimination without outlawing the good of it as well as the bad. And there is good in discrimination, our lives are built around it, around choice. And that applies to discrimination between races as well as between religions (which church do you prefer?).

That is not an arguable point — the desirability of the right to discriminate is conceded by everyone. What is arguable is the rightness or wrongness of certain kinds of discrimination. It is argued, by the advocates of this bill, for instance, that it is wrong to preclude a person from employment solely because of his skin color. This, we are told, is the sort of discrimination that should be outlawed.

Concede, for the purpose of illustration, this is true — tho it isn't — that it is invidiously discriminatory to deny employment because of race or religion.

And assume that an applicant — any applicant — is refused employment by an employer for any of a number of other reasons, anything other than the applicant's skin color.

Assume, as a result of not getting the job, the applicant, out of hand, charges the employer with "racial discrimination." There is no reason or prohibition in the bill to keep him from doing so; being human, he has skin color.

How in the world could an employer defend himself in a case like that? How can he prove he did not hire the man because, say, he had gotten word of something in the applicant's past or in his private life, something that made him, in the eyes of the employer, unsuitable as an employe? Under this cirumstance, how could the employer prove this was the reason — and not the man's skin color — that cause him not to engage the applicant?

He couldn't, without running the risk of slander.

Now, the potential in this situation is so elementary as to be repugnant to any intellectually honest person.

What, then, is "discrimination" to be, in the eyes of the law? How in the world can you play ball if you have no ground rules — or are forced to abide by rules that are made up as you go along? In the language of the bill, (Sec. 711-b), "The President is authorized to take such action as may be appropriate. . ." That approaches absolutism: It authorizes any action, within the broad scope of federal law, he wants to take. He will make his own ground rules.

And that, mind you, is precisely what will happen if this bill is enacted without a definition of its key word: The rules will be interpreted as the game progresses, first one way, then another — as is the way of men.

Consequently, once the President signs this bill — if he signs it — we will no longer have a land governed by law. We will have a land governed by men.

And that, by definition, is despotism.

Is Communism a Jewish Conspiracy?

Does This Explanation Of the Cause of Communism Have Any Basis of Fact?

By V. ORVAL WATTS, Ph.D.
From Faith & Freedom

Editor's note: This article was written several years ago by Dr. Watts, who is now dean of the Freedom School's six-month Phrontistery.

No one who knows history should ever be surprised to come across the theory that some particular race or religion is the prime source of evil. Always, everywhere, man is prone to distrust aliens and nonconformists, ready to believe that they are evil in aims and conduct.

So today, as Americans glimpse some of the evil of communism, or socialism, they would like to believe that it is quite foreign to their own ways of thinking and living.

The truth is that communism, socialism and "welfare state" are merely modern terms for coercive collectivism, and no nation seems ever to have escaped this blight entirely. We find it more general and complete as we look backward over the history of most countries, and in the earliest and most primitive societies it was so complete that individual rights and freedom were hard to find.

Yet literate persons, even ones as literate as John Beaty, then a professor of English at Southern Methodist University, are trying to trace this most ancient and widespread evil to a supposed original source in a particular race and religion.

BLOOD TEST LOYALTY

Of course it would be most helpful if we could tell a Communist by a blood test or by finding out the nationality or religion of his forebears.

But, on the other hand, if a racial, national or religious theory of communism is wrong, efforts to apply it are worse than wasted. For such efforts must divide peoples into warring camps, which provide ideal conditions for Communist ideas and practices.

That is why is is important to deal frankly and thoroly with John Beaty's book, "The Iron Curtain Over America," which describes communism as a world-wide conspiracy of "Judaized Khazars" of Russia.

This people Beaty finds to be the evil off-spring of a "mixed stock with Mongol and Turkic affinities" that over a thousand years ago became converts to "Babylonian" Judaism.

They are now, he says, commonly known as "Russian Jews" and they are taking control of the world. They seized Russia in the Bolshevik Revolution of 1917. They came close to gaining control of Germany before Hitler ousted them. They are rapidly gaining control in other countries.

A MONSTROUS SURRENDER

These cunning conspirators avenged their set-back in Germany. They gained control of the foreign policy of the United States, Beaty says, and they used this control in World War II to destroy "the successor state of the Teutonic Knights" (Prussianized Germany). This over-throw of Prussia and Nazi rule he represents as "a monstrous surrender of the Western heritage of Christian civilization" (p. 14).

On page after page of this book, Professor Beaty quotes or lists some "authority" for what he says, with full title, publisher, and date of publication. An unwary reader, therefore, may say, "Surely an author — a college professor and former government official — must know what he writes about when he has consulted so many authorities! He documents everything he says!"

But quotations and references mean nothing unless the author selects them with care and uses them with integrity. Let us see how Professor Beaty uses his multitude of references.

At the outset a critical reader may note that the author sometimes give references for trifling details, while he makes many highly important allegations without a scrap of supporting evidence or documentation.

For example, he gives two references for the irrelevant fact that the Crusaders' Kingdom of Jerusalem in the Middle Ages lasted nearly a hundred years, and he quotes an encyclopedia to support the irrelevant and well-known fact that Martin Luther won the sympathy of many of his country men. Yet he gives no argument or authority for his opinion that the Marxian program of drastic controls is repugnant to the "free western mind" but is quite acceptable to Russian Jews, whom (he says) the Babylonian Talmud taught to accept "authoritarian dictation on everything from their immorality to their trade practices" (p. 27). In fact, he does not even state what this "immorality" or their "trade practices" consisted of.

But far more serious than his hit-or-miss listing of references is his flagrant abuse of such references as he does give for the basic points of his theory. For example, anyone who troubles to check his references will find that Beaty's whole Khazar story has little more historical foundation than the legend of King Arthur and his Knights of the Round Table.

Furthermore, Beaty does not do justice even to the legends, for he omits the various details that suggest the ancient Khazar Jews were a comparatively enlightened people, altho a minority among the Khazars as a whole.

JUDAIZED KHAZARS

No better founded than his story of the origin and character of the ancient Khazars is Beaty's notion that nearly all Russian Jews are direct descendants of these "Judaized Khazars." The authors to whom he refers indicate that the Khazars were scattered to the four winds many hundreds of years ago. They state also that the Jews of Russia seem to have come from every sort of race and region. In fact quite contrary to Beaty's theory, these authors point out that the Khazar Jews themselves probably included Palestinian Jews.

In short, as far as Beaty's listed sources show, there is no more reason for assuming that a Russian Jew is a Khazar than to assume that an American Episcopalian is a Celtic descendant of King Arthur's Knights.

CHRONIC SUBVERSIVES.

Next Beaty tries hard to make his legendary "Judaized Khazars" appear to be chronic subversives. To this end he refers to Hazen's Modern European History in support of his allegations that the Khazar Jews were so stubbornly hostile that they used the "new freedom" granted them by Czar Alexander II to organize an anti-government force of assassins and terrorists.

But in fact Hazen gives no support whatever to Beaty's contention. Instead, he says that the violence resulted not from any "new freedom," in the latter half of Alexander's reign. Hazen says, "It was not long before Alexander. . . gave up all dally with reforms and relapsed into the traditional repressive ways of Russian monarchs. This reaction aroused intense discontent and engendered. . .nihilism."

Still more important, Hazen does not mention either "Khazars" or "Jews" in connection with this violence or anti-government activity, and neither does Vizetelly whom Beaty mentions as his other reference in this matter.

Beaty then proceeds to represent Khazar Jews as the founders and prime movers of the Communist party in Russia, and he lists the Encyclopedia Britannica and the Universal Jewish Encyclopedia as supporting references.

Again we find on checking these references that Beaty falsifies the record. The encyclopedia authors make it clear that a non-Jewish organization started the Communist party in Russia fourteen years before the Jewish Bund was formed. They state further that the Jews in the Communist movement before 1917 were mainly Mensheviks who favored nonviolent, peaceful, legal and gradualist tactics.

At one point Beaty quotes the Jewish Encyclopedia as follows: "reaction to those excesses was Jewish support of the Bolsheviks. . ." (p. 27). He uses this excerpt to show how the Jews reacted to what he calls the "regulations. . .to curb the anti-government activities of the Jews" following the murder of Alexander II and under Nicholas II.

In fact, however, the author of the encyclopedia article at that point unmistakably referred, not to any "excesses" under the Czars, but to the later massacres of Jews by the counter-revolutionary armies in 1919-1920. This makes the Jews in Russia reluctant supporters of the Bolsheviks after the Revolution of 1917, not before it as Beaty charges.

THE BOLSHEVIKS

Moreover, immediately after the sentence that Beaty quotes in part, the encyclopedia author states, "Yet the majority of Jewish radicals adhered to democratic socialism, and among the Jewish working class the Leninist faction had a limited following. From the first, the so-called United Jewish Socialist Labor party fought the Bolsheviks, and the more influential Bund, too, after some hesitation ranked itself with the menshevik opposition, tho many of its members joined the Bolsheviks . . . ."

This encyclopedia author continues, "The Jewish masses viewed the seizure of power by the Bolsheviks with apprehension. . .The prohibition of free enterprises, no matter how small, meant economic disaster for them." Nothing that I could find in Beaty's references controverts these statements in the Jewish Encyclopedia about the nonparticipation of most Jews in the Bolshevik movement before 1917. According to his own authorities, comparatively few Jews in Russia were Communists before 1917, and those who did join the party were anti-Bolshevik. Beaty gives no hint of these facts.

Beaty's references also show that after the Bolshevik Revolution, the Jews never gained sufficient influence to preserve their own religion against the anti-religious policies of the Bolsheviks. Only when they found that their lives depended on the defeat of the White Armies in 1919-20 did they side with the revolution against the counter-revolutionary forces. In the same way, the non-Jewish people of the Ukraine in 1941-42 were driven back into the grip of Stalin by the stupid cruelty of the Nazi invaders whom the Ukraine people at first welcomed as liberators.

Incidentally, it is typical of the way Beaty distorts the picture that he uses only such terms as "precautions" and "regulations" (pp. 25-27) to refer to what his own authorities (both Jews and non-Jew) call "serfdom," "pogroms," and "massacres" of the Jews by Czarist and anti Soviet forces.

Under the Soviet regime, up to 1936, the Jews achieved tolerance, not for their religion, but for their ancestry. But after 1936-38, as the Universal Jewish Encyclopedia and other writers point out, the Jews were largely purged from government positions. Beaty himself represents this "Jewish Encyclopedia" as a reliable source, and it states that, far from being the Jewish movement that Beaty pictures it, Russian communism today is definitely anti-Jewish.

WHOSE CONSPIRACY?

Russian Bolsheviks are anti-Jewish as they are anti-Christian. They use a person of Jewish antecedents only if he becomes anti-Jew as they use one of Christian antecedents if he is anti-Christian. In short, communism is no more a Jewish conspiracy because it contains former Jews than it is a Christian plot because it contains former Christians or descendants of Christians.

It's Up to You

How to Live Without Working

By H. E. KERSHNER, L. H. D.

At the heart of the problem of unemployment is the fact that we have made relief so easy that many find it possible and preferable to live without working. According to a survey made in two states by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, about one-sixth of the persons on relief are not entitled to it while the average for the country is 5.4 per cent. Secretary Anthony J. Celebreeze admits that the rate would have been higher had the investigation been made by trained investigators rather than by social workers themselves. Since these welfare workers were really checking on themselves, it is reasonable to assume that they minimized chiseling.

The relief program of the Health, Education and Welfare Department alone costs the American people about $5 billion dollars a year or more than the entire cost of the Federal Government in any peacetime year prior to the New Deal. There is one large category of unemployed persons who do not want to work and have found ways to avoid it. Instances have come to my personal attention of people who will not work until they have exhausted their social security, unemployment relief or welfare allowances after which, they will work a little until the next checks come in. Some make the relief do and refuse all work. One mother told a man who wanted to hire her two sons that he would not find them until they had exhausted the newly arrived relief check.

Large as are the unemployed rolls, restaurants, hotels, farmers, and home owners who try to hire housekeepers and yard-workers, keep reporting a chronic shortage of help. Newspapers carrying columns of "help wanted" advertisements appear in the same towns and cities where relief rolls are large. Many of these unemployed persons refuse work that is not to their liking or not in the location which they prefer. Companies advertising for help of various kinds report that they are unable to fill positions even tho relief rolls at the same time and place remain swollen.

The "U. S. News and World Report" tells of an employment agency head who reports that a file clerk left her $60 a week job because she was bored. Another because she had to work from 9 to 5. Some quit their jobs and go on relief while they take a vacation or look for a better job. A substantial number of people draw relief pay while working at regular jobs. Many instances of that kind have come to my personal attention including some persons in my own employ. There is a well defined class of unemployed who plan to work just enough to make them eligible for unemployment relief during the remainder of the time. There are, of course, many housewives in this category.

If our welfare and unemployment relief administrators established and enforced the practice of not offering welfare or unemployment relief to any person who refused a job of any kind, the relief rolls would be cut down to a fraction of what they are today and billions of dollars would be saved every year.

What That 1961 Memo Really Meant

From Life Lines

In December, 1961, a 24-page memorandum entitled "The Radical Right in America Today" was delivered to the U.S. attorney general's office. Often referred to in recent months by writers on both sides of current controversies, the memo lays out a systematic plan to silence every important voice for freedom in America by using every available power of the federal government. Few documents in recent history have been so brutally clear in spelling out the manner of destroying freedom of disagreement.

The memorandum begins with the assumption that criticism of prominent persons and groups so identified is not enough; direct action must be taken against them. The memorandum accurately notes the recent rapid growth of patriotic organizations in this country — organizations firmly opposed to socialism at home and a "no-win" policy abroad. It is admitted that "millions of Americans" have the same goals and approve of these patriotic groups.

It is interesting to note that the authors of this memorandum did not accurately describe the true beliefs and goals of active American patriots today. They say little about the dream of maximum personal freedom, the lodestar of the patriot. They can only grind out the worn-out charge that every patriot regards anyone who disagrees with him as a traitor or communist. The fact is that most of the groups and persons listed as part of the "Radical Right" have never accused anyone of being a traitor or a communist.

The patriot wants freedom, and this accounts for the great and growing popularity of patriotism.

It is precisely this freedom that the authors intend to destroy. The memorandum, which was distributed to all top-level administration officials and "certain sympathetic congressmen," pulls no punches; it sets forth a five-point program for crushing all disagreement with programs of the "planners."

The first point concerns high-ranking officers in the armed services who are, or who would like to be, active patriots. The memorandum recommends that the secretary of defense investigate all such officers, find out just who they are and what they think, and then warn them against expressing their convictions publicly "in any way, shape or form." It would be in the national interest, the memorandum states, for these patriotic officers to resign from the service.

The second point is as simple as it is shocking; as many patriotic organizations as possible should be placed on the attorney general's list of subversive groups which intend to "alter the form of government of the United States by unconstitutional means." The F.B.I. is urged to infiltrate patriotic organizations, and to "draw up charges" against them so that they could be placed on the attorney general's list — now confined almost entirely to communist and communist-front organizations.

The third point calls for the use of every possible federal power to restrict and cut off the flow of funds to patriotic organizations, especially those publishing or broadcasting their views on a large scale. Disallowance of tax exemptions and tax deductions are two suggested weapons. Another is infiltration of patriotic groups by secret agents instructed to find out every detail of financing. There is no pretense that any law is being violated by these publications or broadcasts; it is simply stated that governmental pressure tactics can and should be used to interfere with the financing of organizations which disagree in print or on the air with the thinking of the memo's authors.

The fourth point demands the use of the broad, ill-defined powers of the Federal Communications Commission to choke off radio and television broadcasting of patriotic programs.

The fifth point seeks to curb J. Edgar Hoover and to make a major federal effort to cancel the effectiveness of his warnings about the communist apparatus in this country.

Summarizing, this is the program proposed in the memorandum:

Muzzle the military.

Place patriotic organizations on the attorney general's subversive list.

Hinder the financing of such organizations.

Silence J. Edgar Hoover.

It is good to have it so clearly stated!

This plan for the suppression of free speech does not need argument against it. The memo needs only to be properly publicized. Its frightening nature is obvious to anyone who studies it carefully.

It does not call for free and open debate on the many important issues which American patriots have raised in recent years. It does not seek a way to awaken more of the American people to the importance of these issues, and to an understanding of the different points of view which they have created. Nor does it urge a respectful hearing for Americans who have spent years in devoted public service and who feel it is their right and duty to express their opinions about obtaining better government.

Instead, it offers a plan to silence debate, to lull the American people to sleep, and to force the resignation of public servants who are "guilty" of expressing patriotic love of country.

It is not equality that this plan defends, as it claims; it is entrenched power. And this entrenched power cannot endure if enough of the American people come to understand it for what it really is.

The nature and purpose of this plan to destroy freedom go far beyond any issues of public policy. Americans who hold different viewpoints on such matters as foreign aid, the United Nations, and federal welfare programs can and should unite in opposition to a deliberate attempt to destroy free speech and a free press by the use of pressure tactics.

Some of those who cried most loudly for free speech when admitted communists were prosecuted should speak now in defense of the right of American patriots to be heard. To be sure, many of these persons do not agree with American patriots; neither do they agree with the communists. Their advocacy of freedom should be real, not a sham.

Americans recognize that a free citizen has a full and unlimited constitutional right to speak out for what he believes, to join with other Americans, and to use his money to make possible a wider hearing for the voices of freedom. To deny the right to speak out, to form and join patriotic groups, or to finance them, is to deny rights absolutely essential to preserving American freedom. Hundreds of thousands of Americans on hundreds of battlefields have given their lives to protect these rights. Nor is any limitation of these rights by governmental pressure more defensible than outright denial. The government has no business touching them at all.

The memorandum is by no means an isolated example of attempts to curb and limit the right of free speech for active American patriots. A similar purpose lies behind the work of the new so-called "research" organization, Group Research, Incorporated, which from its Washington headquarters mails out "bulletins" over the country for the purposes of either preventing patriots from speaking in any public forum or to discredit them. This "research" organization is not in the business of answering patriot arguments; instead it is quite openly in the business of silencing them.

All of this is deeply disturbing to the sincere patriot; but at the same time, he should remember that open attempts at suppression are always a confession of weakness. If there were solid answers to patriotic arguments, they would be used. If patriots were so weak as to be unimportant, they would be ignored. But the patriotic cause is growing stronger every day and its opponents have no answers; hence, misrepresentation and suppression are the only weapons they have left. Those weapons will never work in a free country against a free people.

They Must Be Confused

By GEORGE BOARDMAN, PhD

During the past few weeks I have listened to several nationally known, self-styled conservatives as they attempted to explain our government to radio listeners. Earnestly, they made statements of this kind: Our representative form of government was designed to maintain government as the servants of the people, in a position inferior to the sovereign position of the individual citizen. They must be confused!

Let's face a couple or three facts. If government is inferior to the people, how can the people expect that which is inferior to accomplish what the people believe they are unable to accomplish for themselves?

Taking a long look towards the past, I realize that members of my family, their friends and acquaintances took a very dim view of those who engaged in politics. While there was a rather general exodus of members of my family from Chicago during the 20's, I can recall not a single instance where some member of the family associated socially, or even casually, with politicians.

Logically, government which holds power over the people, must be viewed unrealistically and thus rose-colored glasses if one is to feel that those who rule hold an inferior position to those who are governed. While I and my immediate family feel that public office holders are unacceptable socially, we fully recognize the horrible power which enslaves us. A less than superior force, and I use the word force deliberately, could not hold us in bondage, in involuntary servitude.

At this point, I can always hear a disagreeable voice shouting, "Well, if you don't like it, you can always leave." The comment is sheer sopnistry. I am unable to leave without the consent of government which checks to make sure I have paid the final tribute, and I know of no country I can enter without the consent of government, and I don't see how I can gain by switching slave masters, even tho Mr. Yankus thought one ruler might be less tyrannical than another.

Obviously, my viewpoint is not generally accepted since millions of Americans will go to the polls this year, either to keep their present rulers in power or to try to gain a more or less tyrannical ruler, according to the individual point of view.

Yet most Americans, casually and unthinkingly, like to look upon themselves as free people and several "conservative" commentators and writers will work feverishly to maintain the illusion. I use the word feverishly because I don't see how anybody can continue to go with the same line year after year unless they suffer from a fever which prevents them from achieving intellectual maturity.

It was only a few years ago when a senator from Kentucky, while holding a national political party chairmanship, wrote, "We have ruled in the best interest of all the 175 million American people," and I dare to suggest to you that such a statement would not be made by a man who felt his position was inferior to that of the people he ruled.

Of course, a chief executive also stated that the energies of all the people of the country must be harnessed for the good of the country and I immediately suspected he did NOT feel his position to be inferior to the position of the people who paid the bills. Sure, I know my energy has been harnessed for the support of politicians and tyrants ruling other countries but I don't pretend that anyone holding power inferior to mine would be able to harness me.

Oddly enough, those who speak of government holding a power inferior to the power of the people, also refer to many of the rulers in terms akin to adoration-hero worship and this seems a bit less than logical to me, also. They must be confused!

Well, maybe it makes people feel good to imagine they hold their own destiny in their own hands when they go to the polls to cast their votes for an incumbent or a new ruler. Too bad! They're confused.

Good luck and good health to you, in Freedom.

Survival Rate Increase Noted In Breast Surgery

A more extensive operation for breast cancer was credited today with increasing the five-year survival rate of these patients by 13 per cent.

Dr. Everett D. Sugarbaker, Jefferson City, Mo., reported the encouraging results with extended radical mastectomy in the current Journal of the American Medical Association.

The technique consists of removing the chain of internal mammary lymph nodes that lie near the midline of the chest in addition to the axillary lymph chain near the armpit, Dr. Sugarbaker explained. The operation includes the removal of a segment of chest wall overlying the mammary chain, he said.

To evaluate the extended surgery, Dr. Sugarbaker compared 158 patients who underwent the newer technique between 1951-1957 with 88 patients who had conventional operations between 1947-1950.

Dr. Sugarbaker said he performed all the operations on private patients and, on the basis of axillary involvement, the extent of the tumor was roughly comparable in both groups.

Of those operated on in the conventional manner, 50 of 88 cases, or 57 per cent survived the five-year period, he reported. Among those undergoing the extended procedure, 111 of 158, or 70 per cent, survived for five years.

The patients accounting for most of the increased survival rate were those in whom the cancer involved both the internal mammary and axillary lymphatics, Dr. Sugarbaker said. In these patients, he said, the percentage surviving increased from 37 per cent for those undergoing conventional surgery to 70 per cent for those undergoing extended radical mastectomy.

The increased survival appears to be derived from those patients in whom the tumor spread via the lymph routes rather than via the blood system, he said.

Commenting on the report in an accompanying Journal editorial, Dr. Warren Cole, Chicago said:

"Better understanding and further experience are needed first, to determine when the extended technique should be used and when the conventional operation should be done. In the meantime, this report does represent progress in our attempt to continue to increase the survival rate after surgical therapy for cancer."

Wasson High School News

By CAROL JENSEN

Starting last Wednesday and continuing weekly, the Wasson band room, no. 182, will be open during the lunch periods for use of the student body. Students will be able to listen to classical, pop, Broadway, and folksing records from the private musical library of Gus Jackson, Wasson's band director, during these periods. The only rules are that the students remain quiet as long as they are in the room and that no one takes any food into the band room. Students can leave any time they wish to; this is not a required class, but one designed for the pleasure and benefit of the students.

Wasson sweatshitrs were delivered to those students who had ordered them the last two weeks. The new sweatshirts are of two styles — the red, long-sleeved one with "Thunderbirds of Wasson" on the front, and the white, short-sleeved one with the "Wasson T-Bird" on the left side.

Wasson's student telephone directory, the T-Bird Tele Talk, went on sale Monday. The directory has the names, addresses, and telephone numbers of most Wasson students arranged alphabetically according to sex and year. Work on the Tele Talk began last year when the students filled out special informational cards in sponsor group. Another sponsor group was held later to check the correctness of spelling and numbers of the the directory. The telephone directory was sold by members of Wasson's student council.

Jan. 3 was the date of a special sponsor group meeting for the purpose of voting for the second semester Student Council. Students were able to vote for 10 of the names on the ballot, and later the students will vote for the final council. Informational slips were also handed to the students during this meeting. These slips contained facts and a reminder about the KO Polio vaccine given last Sunday, the 5th.

Wasson students were on a special schedule last week because of the Scat and Step tests given to juniors. On Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, seniors and sophomores did not have to start school until 9:45 a.m., while juniors had to report to their testing rooms by 8 a.m. First period was omitted on Wednesday; second period was omitted on Thursday, and third period was omitted on Friday.

The December Guidance Newsletter, published by the Wasson counseling department, contained news of interest to the students on extracurricular activities. It also contained a list of clubs at Wasson and the sponsors of these clubs. Twenty-nine clubs were mentioned, each with a different appeal to the interests of students. Thi newsletter also contained some hints on ways to improve study habits for the students.

Students in advanced placement classes at Wasson and Palmer and their parents will have an opportunity to meet at a dinner honoring these students, at 6:30 Tuesday in the Wasson cafeteria. The guest speaker for the evening will be Dr. Arthur W. Brown, assistant director of the advanced placement program, in Princeton, N. J. Dr. Brown is scheduled to be at Wasson Tuesday, probably to visit some of the advanced classes.

The week of Jan. 20 is the time for semester exams at Wasson. Students will attend regular classes on Monday, Jan. 20, and then attend only exam classes on Tuesday thru Thursday. There will be no school for students on Friday, Jan. 24, for teachers will be averaging grades.

Mr. and Mrs. D.W. Huenink of Sheboygan, Wis. announce the engagement of their daughter, Jane Elenore, to Gary Orin Loo, son of Mr. and Mrs. Orin Loo of 7th and Polo Dr., Colorado Springs, on Sunday, Dec. 22. An engagement party was held at the Huenink home in Sheboygan.

Miss Huenink is a graduate of Briarcliff College and the University of Wisconsin where she was affiliated with Delta Gamma Sorority. Mr. Loo has attended the University of Colorado and is presently attending Colorado State College. Upon graduation in June Mr. Loo will join the firm of Looart Press Inc. in Colorado Springs. Wedding plans have been made for July 11.

Every since Christmas we've been intending to mention a most unusual greeting card and gift we received. The large card says "Even tho we don't know a note of music, we can send a note of season's greetings," and is signed Vada and Barney Oldfield. Enclosed was small recording of "The Barney Oldfield March," composed by Lt. Col. Mark Azzolina, director of the NORAD Band, and performed in Carnegie Hall as a surprise and honor to Col. Barney Oldfield, retired Public Information Officer of NORAD, and founder of the band in 1959.

The jacket of the record is a composite of newspaper clippings from the New York Times, Variety magazine and the Chicago Tribune. The latter says that "Barney has achieved a measure of immortality. . . and when the roll is called up yonder and the PIO's come marching in with crossed paper clips, they will step off smartly to a song honoring one of their own." One side of the jacket says, in huge black headlines: "Immortality?. . .and he isn't even dead yet."

We applaud for Barney and will always treasure this record.

Friends of Mr. Luther M. Hunt are cordially invited to attend an open house in his honor, on the occasion of his 90th birthday, at the home of his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Hunt of 1107 Wood Ave., from [illegible] until 5 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 19.

Mr. Hunt, who has long been active in community service and politics, plans a vacation in Mexico in February.

Invited to pour at the open house are Mrs. Roger D. Hunt, Mrs. Donald L. Hunt, Mrs. Arthur Herzberger, Mrs. Robert Beadles, Mrs. William C. Mason, Mrs. William Steele, Mrs. L.T. Koke and Mrs. Paul Draper.

Prof. Amanda Ellis of Colorado College spent Christmas in Chicago, where she was entertained by friends, including several of her former students.

While there Miss Ellis attended meetings of The Modern Language of America; The College English Association and the National Council of Teachers of English.

Miss Ellis is a former vice president of the National Council of Teachers of English and served as head of the Articulation Committee for five years. She was on the organization's public relations committee for twenty years and has appeared on its programs in various places for the past 25 years.

Miss Ellis has also headed the Articulation Committee of the National College English Association of the Council which has a membership of 64,000. The College English Association has a membership of 5,000.

Articles by Miss Ellis have appeared in the College Association "Critic," and in the "English Journal" as well as in college English magazines published by these groups.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn D. Arney left for their home in San Leandro, Calif., after spending the holidays with Mrs. Arney's Parents, Mr. and Mrs. Murl L. Myers of 1016 N. Institute.

Flower and Garden Magazine, a national publication, carries a small article about the Hobby Garden Club of Colorado Springs, under "Garden Club Talk." The article features a field trip taken by the club last summer and mentions the club's year book which lists Colorado wild flowers placed on the conversation list by the Colorado State Federation of Garden Clubs.

The altar was decorated with white poinsettias and a cluster of candles interwoven with ivy and anchored in an aspen log, designed by the bride and bridegroom.

Nuptial music was played before and after the ceremony by Gordon Lapp, Champaign, Ill., at the harpsichord.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. David Derstine, brother of the bridegroom, and Rev. Raymond Yoder, father of the bride.

The bride's attendants were Miss Mary Miller, Evanston, Ill., maid of honor and Mrs. Ron Weaver, Denver, matron of honor. They wore cranberry red velveteen dresses which featured fitted bodices with matching red satin cummberbunds. Their pillbox hats were of red satin. They carried bouquets of white chrysanthemums and ivy.

Royal Unzicker, Evanston, and Leslie Swartley, Goshen, served as groomsmen. Jon Yoder, Hagerstown, Md., brother of the bride, and Ron Weaver, Denver, were ushers.

Mrs. Stanley Reedy, Chicago, was in charge of the guest book. Miss Gloria Yoder, sister of the bride, assisted with the gifts.

Entering the chapel with her father who gave her in marriage, the bride wore a full length gown of white velveteen enhanced by a two panel train. The fitted bodice had a boat neckline and long tapered sleeves. A matching pillbox held her veil. The gown was made by the bride's aunt, Mrs. William Beschorner, Washburn, Ill.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held in the Goshen College Church Fellowship Hall. Guests served included friends and relatives from Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Colorado, Maryland and Indiana. Mrs. Duane Riegsecker, Goshen, Ind., and Mrs. Glenn Byler, Syracuse, Ind., were hostesses of the reception table. Miss Hilda Van Neck, Bluffton College, Bluffton, Ohio and Miss Beckie Yoder, Goshen, Ind., poured coffee and punch. They were assisted by Miss Arlene Harder, Goshen College, Goshen, Ind. The wedding cake was made by Mrs. William Beschorner.

Following a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Cressman are residing in Woodland Park, where Mr. Cressman is a social worker at the Frontier Boys Camp and Mrs. Cressman is an English teacher at the Woodland Park High School.

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP)—An airline promotion stunt that preceded the recent flurry of special family discounts was the policy of a local airline to offer a "two - for - the - price-of-one" ticket for wives taking weekend trips with their husbands. After a sellout inauguration of the system, an eager public-relations man wrote to all the wives for testimonials as to how they had enjoyed their weekends. Result: airline prestige plummeted as divorce rates skyrocketed.

Questions and Answers on Alcoholism

A REALISTIC LOOK AT ALCOHOLISM

Editor's Note: As a public service, the Gazette Telegraph will answer questions on alcoholism and problem driinking in our region. Send all inquires to this newspaper. Answers will be supplied by G. L. McDougall, director, Alcholism Information Center, Out West Building, sponsored by the El Paso County Council on Alcoholism.

1. Q. How many have benefitted from A.A.?

A. There are approximately 300,000 members who have achieved sobriety through A.A. They come from all walks of life — from every stratum of society.

2. Q. How is the success of A.A. accounted for where science and formal religion have failed?

A. A.A. believes that the answer lies in the fact that only an alcoholic can appreciate the problems of another alcoholic and understands the devious workings of an alcoholic mind.

3. Q. What, if anything, besides sobriety does A.A. hold out to an alcoholic?

A. A.A. is not a cure-all for all the problems of life. But by enabling an alcoholic to maintain sobriety, it makes it possible for him to meet the problems common to the alcoholic and non-alcoholic like a man — instead of trying to run away from them by getting drunk, which only intensifies and multiples the problems.

4. Q When was A.A. founded?

A. A.A. is about 29 years old. It began with two men, both alcoholics. One of them conceived the idea that he could help himself by trying to help another with the same problem and since then have devoted themselves to carrying the message to other victims of alcoholism.

5. Q. Is A.A. opposed to liquor as such?

A. A.A. is not engaged in a crusade against alcoholic beverages or drinking. It is not out to reform the world; its members are solely interested in maintaining their sobriety and in helping others to obtain and to maintain sobriety.

6. Q. Why is helping other alcoholics stressed so much in A.A?

A. To put it boldly and bluntly, experience has shown that by helping others, you help yourself to stay sober.

7. Q. Why, is this so?

A. It is an old-fact that there is no satisfaction greater than the satisfaction which comes from doing something for somebody else. It's good for the ego. It gives your morale a lift. It increases your self-esteem. Last but not least, it puts you on the spot. It's less likely that an A.A. will backslide if he knows he has in effect set himself up as an example as to what A.A. can do for another.

8. Q. Is there anything else besides personal contact with other alcoholics — that is, carrying the message of A.A. to them, that is regarded as essential if an A.A. is to maintain his own sobriety?

A. Yes, attendance at meetings is highly essential. The history of A.A. shows that slips are fewer among those who have been regular in attendance at meetings and actively participated in them.

Reorganization Of Courts Will Be Sought

DENVER (AP) — Sen. Carl Fulghum, R-Glenwood Springs, says he hopes to bring the first of the bills reorganizing Colorado courts before the legislature next week, possibly Tuesday or Wednesday.

Fulghum was chairman of the committee which drafted the bills. They are intended to carry out a constitutional amendment passed by the people in 1962. The amendment eliminates justices of the peace, effective next January.

The bills propose a reshuffle of duties of counties and district courts.

Fulghum says he hopes to bring up for Senate action first a bill revising the county courts system. One section, allowing appointment of part-time county judges in some counties, may require an interpretation by the Colorado Supreme Court before final legislative action is taken, Fulghum said. He said an interrogatory is likely.

The Glenwood Springs senator said the second bill due for debate is one which raises fees charged to court litigants to pay part of the additional cost.

The bill revising the district court system and creating 28 additional district judgeships is the third bill he wants the Senate to consider.

County commissioners and others have raised objections to the bills, contending they will increase taxes sharply. They want the legislature to pass a law allowing special tax levies for court expense.

COSTLY INJURIES

Governors Take Opposite Stands On Wilderness

DENVER (AP) — Governors of Colorado and Wyoming, both Republicans, took opposing stands Friday on the proposal to establish 8.6 million acres of western land as wilderness areas.

Gov. John Love of Colorado gave qualified support to a bill by Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., which would allow filing of land leases and mining claims in the wilderness areas until 1973.

Gov. Clifford P. Hansen of Wyoming said he opposed any new wilderness legislation at present. He urged multiple use of land in wilderness areas.

The hearing concluded today. It is being held before the public lands subcommittee of the House Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs. Subcommittee chairman is Rep. Walter S. Baring, D-Nev.

Today's witnesses included represenatatives of various conservation groups.

Love said the Dingell bill is preferable to one introduced by Rep. John Saylor, R-Pa., partly because of provisions for mineral leases and mining that are not in Saylor's. He opposed a bill that has been passed by the Senate.

He said he hoped the proposed law would not permit the government to reduce grazing on national forests.

Love was supported in his stand by a number of state agencies and other groups including the Denver Water Board and the Colorado Mining Association.

The Colorado State Chamber of Commerce however, expressed strong opposition to "any present wilderness legislation."

Richard Kitchen, speaking for the chamber, said that to condemn wilderness areas merely to keep them in the natural state "provides a means of insuring that vast acres of public lands can never be enjoyed in accordance with the principals of the greatest good for the greatest number."

He urged that if a bill is passed, a provision be made to eliminate land that can be developed "for useful purposes."

Gov. Hansens' director of natural resources, William H. Curry, said Wyoming's growth would be curtailed by any bill that would not permit the state to develop her water resources, partly by building high altitude dams.

Henry Wilson, president of the Montana Farm Bureau Federation, said his group generally favors the Dingell bill if water, mineral and grazing rights are maintained.

Six in Plane Missing Over Lake Michigan

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. (AP)—Civilian and military aircraft resumed a search at dawn today for six members of an Illinois family whose light plane was believed missing over lake-dotted northern Michigan.

Search coordinators said an amphibious plane and helicopter from the U.S. Coast Guard would join a state police aircraft and about 25 Civil Air Patrol planes in the search.

The pilot of the missing single engine Cessna 205, H.J. Cummings, of River Forest, Ill., his wife, Pat, and four of their six children, ranging in age from 6 to 11, left St. Charles, Ill., at 3 p.m. Friday for a weekend of skiing in northern Michigan.

Cummings was trying to locate an airstrip at the Boyne Mountain ski resort when he was last heard from at 6:43 p.m.

CAPITOL STUFF

By TED LEWIS

WASHINGTON — Let's be honest about it. President Johnson's first State of the Union address Wednesday was a political smasheroo — because it confused the living daylights out of Republicans.

The President declared war on poverty in a most earnest and clearly heartfelt way. Since everybody is against poverty, Republicans just have to be on his side, at least in principle.

Johnson at the same time went all-out for economy in government. The Democratic Party, at least since FDR days, was supposed to be the "spend and spend" party. The GOP figured it had this issue sewed up — it alone insisting on budget balancing.

This avowed determination to beat poverty and cut government spending does have a significant political connotation, as Johnson well knows, even if he talked about such matters on the proper statesmanlike plane.

Of course, what he had to say on these two specific subjects drew the expected cynical Republican responses. As House GOP Whip Leslie Arends (Ill.) said — and it was a half-truth at least — "The message was patently a 1964 political campaign document."

So what? Any President's State of the Union address in a national election year is sensibly turned to the voter's ear.

And Sen. Jacob Javits (R-N. Y.) had a valid point also when he labeled the President's "war on poverty" just a "superficial generality which is more of a slogan than anything else."

But Javits well knows that while the Johnson Administration may succeed in doing litle about ridding the nation of poverty, the President's aim along that line has strong political oomph.

Neither is there any real argument among Republicans about whether the President really feels strongly about this poverty problem.

He does. The reason springs from his own "poor boy" farm background in Texas. His voting record, both while in the House and Senate, almost invariably was consistent with those inbred views. He has always supported so-called "social welfare" legislation.

THE TIME-HONORED WAR ON POVERTY

It reflects no discredit on Johnson to recall that he is not the first President to declare war in a big way on poverty. During the New Deal one of FDR's chief aims was to get rid of rural poverty — hence all the varieties of farm legislation to help the farmer get better prices for his crops and a better deal on mortgages.

Yet today it is this same rural poverty problem which is the heart of the Johnson effort, particularly in the South and the Appalachian areas.

But FDR did not kick off the first drive on poverty. What Herbert Hoover said in a campaign speech in August of 1928 could almost have been repeated by Johnson in his Congressional appearance today.

Said Hoover 35 years ago: "We in America today are nearer to the final triumph over poverty than ever before in the history of any land. The poorhouse is vanishing from among us. We have not yet reached the goal, but, given a chance to go forward with the policies of the last eight years, we shall soon, with the help of God, be in sight of the day when poverty will be vanished from this nation."

DILEMMA OF DESTITUTION AND SPENDING

Well, it didn't turn out that way precisely. And fortunately Johnson is not as optimistic today as Hoover was in 1928, for he reminds that the war on poverty "will not be a short or easy struggle."

By implication, however, as Hoover once said more flatly, Johnson indicated that if the American people want the federal government to do something about human destitution, they should choose him for a full term.

It is admittedly not easy to understand how it is going to be possible to do anything in a big way about underprivileged Americans and cut federal spending at the same time.

As Congressman Arends suggested, it would appear "to take more than the magic words or the skill of an experienced political magician to initiate and expand costly federal programs and at the same time reduce government expenditures."

HOW IT WORKED OUT UNDER ROOSEVELT

Arends should go back to the early days of Johnson's first political hero, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

FDR, it is recalled, won election in 1932 on a pledge to help end the depression (and so solve the creeping paralysis of poverty) by big economies in government.

On March 9, 1933 — a few days after his inauguration — FDR outlined his economy program to the congressional leaders of that day.

'For three long years," Roosevelt told them, "the federal government has been on the road toward bankruptcy. Too often in history liberal governments have been wrecked on the rocks of loose fiscal policy."

So FDR proposed a sharp cut in veterans pensions, a reduction of all federal salaries — including these of members of Congress.

Everybody knows that it wasn't long before FDR was on the spending road instead public works and what have you.

Obviously, there is considerable skepticism here about how long Johnson's similar economy drive will last. But at this time there is no doubt of his deep sincerity on this issue.

He reminded business leaders when he gave them a preview of his State of the Union proposals that they have been complaining for years about federal spending and how its inflationary impact retards the economy. All right, he said in effect, I'm cutting spending to the bone. Now it's your responsibility to deliver a boom — and produce more jobs.

CU Awarded $180,000 In New Grants

The University of Colorado Graduate School has been awarded grants from two organizations that will produce more than $180,000 for CU students and for the University in the next three years.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration awarded the Graduate School 10 predoctoral traineeships to be given next fall to students in space-science fields.

The Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation gave $6,000 to help support three Woodrow Wilson Fellows now studying on the CU campus.

The NASA grants are worth $2,400 for each student plus dependency allowances for each of three years. In addition, CU will receive $2,500 per year for each student.

A year ago CU received 10 other such grants, when the program began. As a result, next fall there will be 20 predoctoral students studying at CU under NASA auspices.

The first 10 grants this year were awarded in 10 different fields — chemical engineering, mechanical engineering, mathematics and applied mathematics, aerospace engineering sciences, astrophysics, physics, biology, chemistry and psychology.

The Woodrow Wilson Fellowships are grants made to graduate students interested in college teaching careers. There are three such fellows at CU this year — in anthropology, French and history.

The $6,000 grant to CU represents $2,000 for each fellow. Three-fourths of the amount may be used to help the fellowship holders into an extra year of graduate work, and the remainder may be used at the discretion of the graduate school, according to Woodrow Wilson officials.

Carson Offers Educational Course Variety

A wide variety of high school, college and vocational courses offered servicemen and their dependents thru the education center at Ft. Carson is the key to many fascinating, rewarding hours for progressive - minded personnel.

Many of them are already taking advantage of the classes given on different levels. There are 637 students currently enrolled in high school completion courses taught on post and thru correspondence. Another 1,228 are now taking college classes. Nearly 1,000 students at Ft. Carson complete high school in a one-year period.

The education program at the mountain post has been highly successful in the past, according to Director James M. Tolstrup. New facilities have enabled the center to expand the scope of its operations in offering new classes on post through the University of Colorado and Colorado College.

Instructors teaching college-level courses are qualified college teachers and visit the Carson "campus" from Colorado College and the Air Force Academy. The scope of the Education Center's services is quite complete.

The span of offerings to the prospective student ranges from literacy training to high-level college courses, and features extensive testing services at all levels.

Two other features of the Carson program are registration services and three counselors to aid the serviceman in planning his educational.

The Colorado University deadline for enrollment is Jan. 29. Because the Army pays 75 per cent of tuition fees, each semester hour costs the soldier only three dollars.

Dunbar Reports On Mandatory Seat Belt Law

Reporting on a study recently conducted in the State of Wisconsin, seat belt installation is mandatory. Attorney General Duke W. Dunbar, Chairman, Colorado Highway Safety Council points out that the law making the installation of these belts mandatory has produced some interesting conclusions:

1. Male occupants tended to use their seat belts more frequently than did female occupants.
2. Seat belts were used by more occupants in 1962-63 Wisconsin cars than by occupants in any of the other groups of cars.
3. When seat belts were installed voluntarily, they were twice as likely to be used as when they were installed by mandate.
4. About two thirds of all occupants were drivers and right front passengers and these occupants had 96 per cent of all available seat belts.

One third of the passengers, therefore, were not afforded the protection of seat belts simply because they occupied seats where belts were rarely installed.

Students Require Parking Spaces

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Students or their parents are too well-to-do to keep down California school costs, a report to the State Board of Education said here.

Charles R. Gibson says that a junior college for 4,000 students requires 45 acres of parking space — enough for 4,500 cars.

Gibson, who is chief of the State Bureau of School Planning, says in some areas land may cost $100,000 an acre.

CU to Exhibit Arts of Southern California

"Arts of Southern California—XIII: Painting" will be the next art exhibit in the University of Colorado Fine Arts Gallery in the Henderson Building. The free, public show, sponsored by the CU Department of Fine Arts, opened Friday.

The show includes one work each by 27 Southern California artists. "In this exhibition there may be an example of work by an artist who in the near future may prove to be of great importance," according to Helen Wurdemann, Los Angeles correspondent for Art in American magazine and director of the Los Angeles Art Association.

The exhibition, which consists almost entirely of abstract art, was organized by the Long Beach Museum of Art which selected the paintings from galleries in Los Angeles, Pasadena, LaJolla, Santa Barbara and San Diego. It is being circulated by the Western Association of Art Museums.

The show will close at CU Feb. 2. Hours are 8 a.m. - 5 p.m. weekdays and 2-5 p.m. Sundays.

Charter Group To Hold Annual Meeting

"The annual meeting of the Colorado Springs Charter Association will take place Monday, Jan. 20, at the Swiss Chalet Restaurant at 6 p.m.

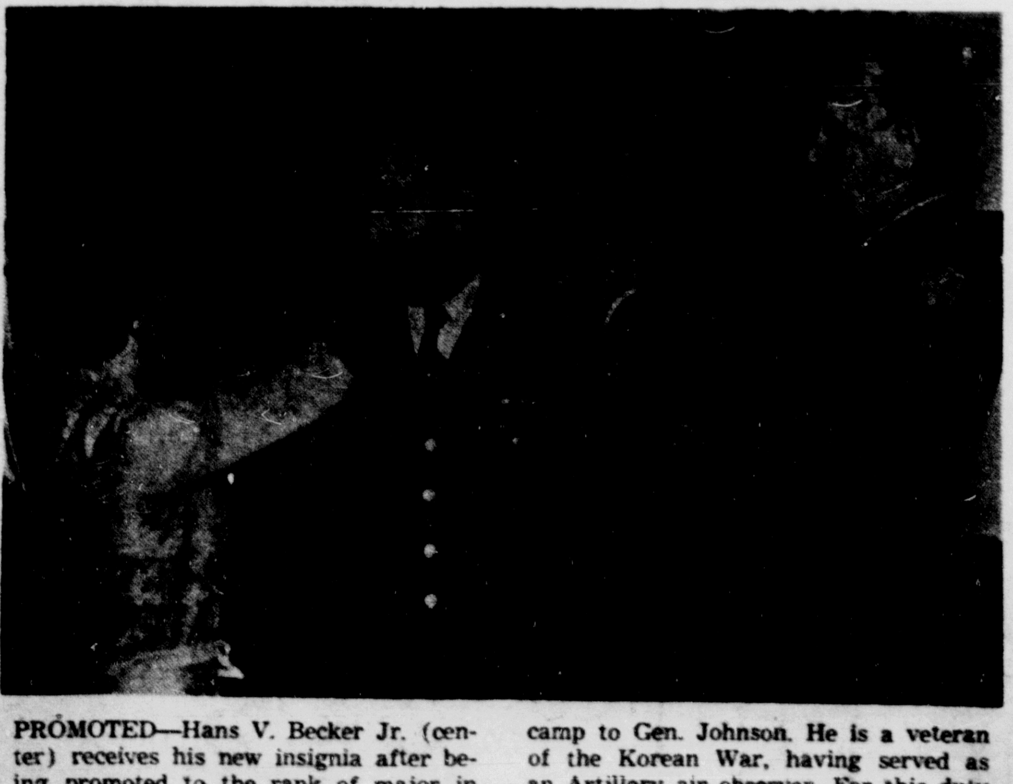
A town meeting approach will be used, to allow ample time for discussion by the members to obtain their judgments, opinions and preferences as to the future activities of the Charter Association.

Fred A. Sondermann, as president, will report on the Association's activities during 1963. Also, nominations and elections will be conducted for the Executive Board for 1964.

Several changes are going to be presented to the members of the Association at this meeting concerning the association's bylaws.

The most important of these is the elimination of the distinction between members who reside within the city limits and those who reside outside those limits.

All interested members of the Pikes Peak area are invited to attend the dinner, which will cost $2.00 per plate; reservations will be required."



PROMOTED—Hans V. Becker Jr. (center) receives his new insignia after being promoted to the rank of major in the Army. Pinning on his gold "leaves" are his wife and Maj. Gen. D. B. Johnson, deputy commanding general of the Army Air Defense Command. Maj. Becker, before his current assignment as an assistant secretary of the general staff at the headquarters, was aide-de-camp to Gen. Johnson. He is a veteran of the Korean War, having served as an Artillery air observer. For this duty he was awarded the Bronze Star Medal for Meritorious Service and the Air Medal. In 1955 he served in this area as a battery commander at Ft. Carson. Maj. Becker, his wife, and their two young sons live at 1461 Howard Ave.

GARDEN RANCH

2502 Flintridge

A glance tells that this easy flowing traffic pattern will allow good housekeeping to be done with speed and efficiency.

The living room and dining area, which has sliding glass doors to the patio, make entertaining really fun. The kitchen is fully convenient and is blessed with an abundance of cabinet space. Dishwasher, disposal, formica counter tops and easy to keep flooring blend to make a well kept, well run kitchen.

The storage room could be a shop, hobby room, 4th bedroom. The rec room with a fireplace is a real family room. The lavatory and utility area are convenient to the back yard so that you may come in from gardening or the children from play, with no mud problems.

OPEN 2 to 5 p.m.

See or Call Mr. Messler, 634-1629

4102 Buttercup

From the entry you take one step down to the sunken family room which is perfectly set off by an Early American brick fireplace.

We don't believe so beautiful a kitchen and den, that is really functional is easily found. The range, wall-oven, dishwasher, sink and refrigerator space are arranged to insure the least number of steps for the home maker in meal planning and preparation. Set in a brick wall in the den is a Bar-B-Que with its own rotisserie. When you look at it, visions of charcoal smoked delicacies dance thru your head.

The hall to the left of the entryway leads to the bedrooms and baths. The main baths imparts a feeling of luxury with its gleaming ceramic tile bath complete with built-in vanity.

Storage space? Oh, yes! Ample even for a large family. In the unfinished area is space for future bedrooms with storage space left over even then.

Church-Vetter Company Completes First House

Byron Church - Bill Vetter Building Co. has completed construction of its first house, at 35 Friendship Lane in the Hill-Mesa Garden of the Gods Development.

The house, termed a "Particular" home for the buyer "who is most particular," has three bedrooms, three baths, a den, an entertainment room, a living room and dining room. It features a moss rock fireplace, and has hot water heat. Kitchen cabinets are of oak.

The new house also features rock, board and batten construction and a hand-split shingle roof on the exterior.

Church is well-known as a real estate consultant and appraiser, in which he has had 17 years of experience. He became a senior member of the Society of Residential Appraisers in 1952, and is a past president of the Southern Colorado Chapter. He is also a past president of the Colorado Chapter of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers, and has written articles for such publications as Residential Appraiser, the National Real Estate and Building Journal and the Appraisal Journal.

Vetter is a newcomer to Colorado Springs. He formerly lived in Bellingham, Wash., where he was engaged for 17 years in sales of building supplies and construction.

Church said the new company will specialize in homes on the Mesa in the Garden of the Gods Additions and the Kissing Camels Subdivision, which he and Vetter consider to be the rapidly developing quality home district of Colorado Springs

Church said their opinion was based on " a careful analysis of the advantages of exceptional view, more convenient access developing in the next few months with new street construction, low taxes high social congruity, the cooler summer breezes at this higher elevation, the generous afternoon hours of sunshine beyond residence areas next to the mountains, the all-new character of the neighborhood that is planned to include schools, churches, shopping facilities and city water supply with adequate pressure. The annual taxes are 24 per cent lower than in the city."

Church said construction of the East-West Freeway and a tie-in with Fillmore Street, plus improvement of Mesa Road and development of the Garden of the Gods Road, "are producing a strong, stimulating effect on the market demand for this area."

"The immdeiate future," he said, "will be a steady growth period for the total Mesa area, as its accessibility suddenly converts from 'difficult' to 'highly convenient.'

"The other obvious factors that are to contribute to this immediate growth include the fruition of the Kissing Camels Golf Course and the Garden of the Gods Club with their extension recreation, entertainment and guest-room and dining facilities.

"The establishment of the high-income technical employment center on the adjacent Garden of the Gods Road in Pikes Peak Industrial Park will bring a total of 750 to 1,000 employees to Hewlett - Packard, Kaman Nuclear, Maytag and other plants in the next two to three years. The $1.8 million Hewlett-Packard plant is under construction, and the new Red Wing Wood Products Co. plant is in production."

Church said that Mesa residents are eligible to apply for membership in the Garden of the Gods and Kissing Camels Golf Clubs. He listed as the most important factor giving the area a great future as "the judicious promotion of the Mesa to avoid inferior construction and to create a neighborhood of socially compatible residents that include prominent business and professional persons, educators and sports enthusiasts."

Lael's Knit Shop To Hold Opening At New Location

Lael's Knit Shop formerly at 112 E. Boulder St., will hold a grand opening at its new location, 3123 N. Hancock Ave., between 12 noon and 6 p.m. Monday.

Refreshments will be served and styles sent especially for the occasion by leading yarn companies will be modeled.

The shop's new location is four times as large as the Boulder Street store, Mrs. Lael G. Emerick, owner of the business, said.

Mrs. Emerick started the shop on Boulder Street three years ago after operating a business from her home for two years. She said the shop was the result of "a hobby that grew into a business."

Mrs. Lael began knitting when she was 5 and began knitting "seriously" when she was 10. While in college, she began altering patterns.

She started her business in her home in 1949 and opened at 112 E. Boulder St. in February, 1961. She moved to 3123 N. Hancock Ave. on Nov. 12, last year.

Lael's specialty is in designing custom patterns for those who want something "original and different." It also makes a specialty of coats, suits and ribbon knits.

The shop has a complete finishing department for blocking and assembling knit wear. Machine knitted garments are made for those who want them.

The shop teaches knitters and assists those who need guidance. Help is also given customers in buying the latest in style, color and suitability of style for the individual.

Lael's has an extensive mail order business, with customers as far away as Alaska and Hawaii.

Lael's Knit Shop specializes in imported yarns. Yarns sold by Lael's are William Unger, Reynolds, Brunswick, Pauline Denham, Burnett and Spinner.

The shop also handles knitting and crocheting accesories, skirt fabrics to match yarns and ribbon for ribbon dresses.

Lael's has two fulltime employees, Mrs. George Shipley and Mrs. Julian Allen, and one part-time employee, Mrs. Anthony Fransen.

The shop is open from 12 noon to 6 p.m. Mondays and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays thru Saturdays.

Mrs. Emrick is an ardent golfer. She has participated in the championshipe flight of the Broadmoor Women's Invitational for six years, winning the championship consolation two years ago. She was women's club champion at Patty Jewett in 1962 before joining the Colorado Springs Country Club, where she was club champion last summer. She played in the Women's Western Amateur, in the championship flight, and the Women's Trans-Mississippi in Denver last summer.

Her husband, Don Emrick, is sales manager of J. D. Adams Co., a Colorado Springs manufacturing company, and serves in an adivisory capacity for the knit shop.

Mr. and Mrs. Emrick have three children, Vall Emrick, a junior at Palmer; Celste Emrick, a junior at Palmer, and Dave Emrick, an eighth grader at Horace Mann Junior High School. All are knitters.

GATLING GUN

HOPKINS, Minn. (UPI) — A deadly new rapid-fire grenade gun, which spits out explosive 40mm grenades at the rate of 250 per minute, promises vastly increased fire power for U.S. troops in battle.

The new weapon, invented by Honeywell employes Duane Youmans and Will Martwick here, can be fired by one infantryman at enemy positions as far as a quarter-mile away. Resembling an old crank-type movie camera, the gun is less than two feet long and only a foot high. Ammunition is loaded on belts like machine gun bullets.

Howard Emrich To Work for Smartt Company

President Bill Smartt announced today that Howard Emrich has resigned as administrative vice president of Alexander Film Co. to accept a position as vice president and administrative assistant of Smartt Construction Co.

In his newly created position, Emrich will provide liaison between Smartt management and its divisions and subsidiaries. He will work directly with the president on major development plans and will devote attention to all phases of the business.

Emrich has been president of Rock Wool Insulating Co. of Pueblo and Colorado Insulating Co. of Denver. Prior to these positions he was associated with the Chicago Tribune in New York City.

He is a graduate in business administration of the University of Illinois, married and resides at 12 Northgate Rd.

He has a son, Peter who is an ensign in the United States Navy stationed at Pearl Harbor, and a daughter, Kathie, who is a freshman at the University of Colorado in Boulder.

In North Carolina's unique Nickels for Know-How education and research program, farmers of that state contribute a nickle to the plan for every ton of feed or fertilizer they purchase.

AQUATIC BATTLE

RINDGE, N.H. (UPI)—From the shore of a pond near here, Henry R. Godfrey of Damariscotta, Maine, saw what appeared to be a black stick going into the air and then back into the water.

Investigation disclosed he was witnessing a battle between a black water snake and a horn pout. The small fish had the head of the three-foot snake in its mouth and was slowly choking the reptile. A companion of Godfrey finally shot the snake with his revolver.

Three Springs Savings Firms Cut Dividends

One Colorado Springs savings and loan association will continue to pay the same rate of dividend this year as it did last, but three other associations have announced they will pay reduced dividends this year.

Continuing to pay 4.5 per cent on savings accounts will be Columbia Savings and Loan Assn., 208 E. Pikes Peak Ave.

Also paying 4.5 per cent will be Security, 111 E. Pikes Peak Ave., which has reduced its rate from 4.75 per cent.

First Federal, 421 N. Tejon St., and Western Federal, 707 N. Nevada Ave., have cut their rates to 4.25 per cent from 4.5 in keeping with similar action by other federal savings and loan associations in the Denver area.

Reductions were said to be the result of new higher reserve requirements of the federal government. To meet the higher cash reserve requirements, assocation officials said, the divident rates were reduced.

Security Savings and Loan Assn.'s 4.75 per cent was the highest dividend rate paid in Colorado in 1963. In a letter to savings customers, the association said "Currently the supply of available funds for home financing is generally more than sufficient to meet the demand of sound loans in Colorado and thruout the United States. This situation has brought about a reduction of interest rates, particularly on better quality property."

SWAP Club Will Hear Sales Expert Speak

Larry Wilson, salesman, author of a book on selling and creator of a sales training course, will speak at the fifth annual SWAP Club awards banquet to be held at the Broadmoor International Center at 7 p.m. Jan. 23.

Wilson, one of the nation's most outstanding young salesman, will present his ideas on "How to Become More Successful in Selling."

Tickets may be reserved by calling 633-8763 or purchased at the door. Price of the tickets are $6.25 if bought from the SWAP club members or $6.50 at the door.

During 1963, Wilson traveled more than 100,000 miles over the United States presenting his lectures on human relations, sales psychology and success.

Wilson was graduated with honors in 1952 from the University of Minnesota. While in school he acted in three major theatre production, won the university senior welterweight boxing championship and held a job selling women's shoes.

After graduation, he became a high school speech teacher, but in 1954 he entered the life insurance business, and in five years — from the time he was 24 until he was 29 — sold $15 million worth of insurance. His insurance sales record won him a life membership in the Million Dollar Roundtable of life insurance men. He is one of the youngest men ever to achieve membership.

Wilson's sales record put him into the field of telling others how he did it. As president of the Larry Wilson Corp., he has written a book on selling and created his sales training course. In addition to his many speaking engagements, he spends hours training sale trainers, writing sales articles skin diving, flying his own airplane and, of course, spending time with his wife and six children.

Stock Market Ends Week With Fair Gain on Average

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market ended its first full week of 1964 trading with a fair gain on average. Trading was the heaviest in more than two months.

It was the market's second straight week of advance, a decided reversal from the last few weeks of 1963 which saw considerable tax-loss selling and switching.

The sharpest gain came on Wednesday in response to President Johnson's State of the Union message in which he combined a proposal for enactment of the $11.1 billion tax cut by Feb. 1 with a surprise budget cut to $97.9 billion. The cut in expenses seemed to make the tax cut much more likely and business leaders — as well as stock prices — showed their approval.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 6.65 to 774.33. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced 2.2 to 289.4.

Both the Dow Jones industrials and the AP average strung together five straight weekly advances to historic new highs before the Friday session. The Dow industrials made a peak of 776.55 on Thursday. The AP average made a high of 289.4 on Thursday and remained unchanged Friday.

The week's volume was 27,043,987 shares compared with 21,891,650 shares in the four-day trading week preceding. It was the largest weekly volume since the week ended Nov. 2 when 28,722,840 shares changed hands.

Despite the expectation of a massive report on smoking and health from the U.S. Public Health Service at the weekend, the cigarette stocks showed surprising strength.

The tempo in the bond markets picked up markedly this week after a two week holiday lull.

Prices of U.S. Treasury bonds declined in response to a surprise advance refunding plan unfolded by the Treasury but steadied in the final trading. Corporate bond trading moved at a near-gallop all week long. Prices churned irregularly.

Some Aspirin Bottles Have Penicillin

NEW YORK (AP)—A major drug manufacturer said Friday night less than one per cent of oral penicillin tablets were mistakenly placed in shipments of six hospital-size bottles of the company's aspirin tablets.

In cooperation with the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, E.R. Squibb & Sons is now attempting to trace and recover these bottles of aspirin. There are 250 penicillin tablets mixed in with 30,000 aspirin tablets, the company said.

While oral penicillin is safer than when injected into the body, the company said it is possible for a person to have an adverse reaction.

Squibb said the aspirin tablet is stamped on both sides with the company name. The penicillin tablet is grooved, but does not bear the company name. Both tablets are white.

Consumer packages, bottles or tins of aspirin carrying the Squibb label are not affected, the company said.

BERMUDA GRASS

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI)—Coastal bermuda grass should be 14 to 16 inches high before it is harvested for hay, Texas A&M range specialists recommend.

Use of commercial fertilizers on coastal bermuda can increase yields "beyond all expectations" without diminishing its rapid growth and drought resistance characteristics, the university has found.

YMCA Week Starts Next Sunday

National YMCA Week will be observed this year from next Sunday to Jan. 26th with the last date being set aside as YMCA Sunday.

The local YMCA has bulletins available for churches to print their orders of services on as well as bulletin inserts telling about the YMCA, which can be distributed in the folders that the churches use.

These bulletins are offered at no cost and many churches have already ordered them to use on YMCA Sunday. The local "Y" cooperates closely with all of the churches in the Pikes Peak Region and is active in both the Council of Churches and the Ministerial Alliance.

Local Man 's Veteran at Butts Field

Aviation and aircraft are vocation and avocation for Franklin J. Macon, aircraft technical inspector for installation maintenance at Ft. Carson.

A pilot since 1942, he has been in Civil Service for 14 years at Ft. Carson, starting as an aircraft shop foreman. His duties include checking the characteristics of aircraft repaired for Ft. Carson both at Butts Field and in Denver and related duties.

An important off-duty activity is Macon's membership in the Experiment Aircraft Association of Colorado Springs. He is rebuilding an Aeronica Champ with other members and has restored a Stinson V77 which he and his co-owners fly to antique aircraft shows.

They are also building a replica of the Curtiss Pusher, one of the Army's first planes.

Headquarters for the experimental group is at Pikes Peak Airport, Fountain.

Macon started flying while he was still a student at Colorado Springs High School. After his graduation in 1942, he enrolled in the civilian student pilot program at Alabama's Tuskegee University. He was an Air Corps aviation cadet and later a gunnery instructor in World War II.

His next field of activity was racing midget cars in western states and flying in air shows. He also flew uranium exploration flights in western Colorado and eastern Utah.

This Colorado Springs native is active in the Junior Chamber of Commerce aviation program and the Colorado Springs Chorale. He is a member of the Peoples Methodist Church.

Macon is the grandson of Charles Banks, the best known Spanish-American War veteran in the Pikes Peak region.

Complications Produced By Prolonged Fasts

Prolonged starvation of obese persons can result in serious complications, a study reported in the current Journal of the American Medical Association showed today.

Among 11 patients who consumed only water and vitamins for periods ranging from 12 to 117 days, severe postural low blood pressure occurred in 3, gouty arthritis in 2, and severe anemia in 1, while 3 other patients developed mild anemia a University of California medical team reported.

The researchers concluded that prolonged starvation was not advisable for obese patients with a history of cardiovascular or cerebral circulatory problems, gout, or liver disease.

The study was reported by Ernst J. Drenick, M.D., Marion E. Swendseid, Ph.D., William H. Blahd, M.D., and Stewart G. Tuttle, M.D., Los Angeles.

Common early side effects consisted of mild headaches, occasional nausea, and some nervousness and tension, they said but these difficulties abated readily and rarely required medication.

One of the most striking and potentially serious complications reported was the development of postural hypotension, a drop in blood pressure upon standing up which produces weakness, fatigue, dizziness, and blurred vision. In one patient ths. occurred after only 12 days of starvation but usually it did not become noticeable until the third or fourth week of fasting.

All but one of the patients were men, and a variety of diseases was represented by the group. Ages ranged from 32 to 71, and weights from 240 to 450 pounds.

Weight losses averaged less than a pound a day, the researchers said. The greatest net loss in one continuous period of starvation was 116 pounds in 117 days by a 39-year-old five foot, six inch, 315-pound woman. Only one patient was able to attain a near-normal weight in a single continous fast.

In general, the researchers found, physical endurance and energy decreased slowly. Severe weakness was uncommon. Younger patients actually seemed to remain fairly vigorous, while older patients required frequent short rests.

The most astonishing aspect of the study, the authors said, was the ease with which prolonged starvation was tolerated. This experience contrasted most dramatically with the hunger and suffering described by individuals who, over a prolonged period, consume a calorically inadequate diet, they pointed out. It was remarkable, they said, that the fast seemed easier for the patient the longer it lasted.

The researchers reported, to their knowledge, the 117-day starvation period had not been exceeded in other similar experiments.

"It appears that the length of starvation which the individual patient will be able to tolerate is unpredictable."

Those who eventually obtained a normal weight seemed to have undergone decisive changes in their eating habits, and seemed to eat a substantially smaller amount than prior to starvation. However, they stressed that the number of patients studied and the follow-up periods were inadequate to make any valid statement on long-range results.

"Prolonged starvation. . . should not be viewed as a panacea for all obese individuals," an accompanying editorial counseled. "The desire of the starving but unhungry patient to effect a more drastic weight loss more quickly may induce him to extend the period of starvation. This can be danegrous.

"At this time, it is not possible to compare the results obtained in prolonged starvation with those in prolonged use of low-calorie diets. Conceivably, reduced metabolic and physical activity of the starving patient could offset the advantage of total caloric restriction. Despite the hazards of starvation, it seems that, in certain excessively obese patients, the gratifying weight loss without hunger may bring about the desired immediate results and help establish a normal eating pattern where other dietary restrictions may fail."

Air Officer To Receive Medal Of Commendation

Capt. Ralph M. Jordon Jr., Air Officer Commanding of the 5th Cadet Squadron, will receive the Air Force Commendation Medal for meritorious service as an academic instructor prior to his assignment to the Air Force Academy.

From June 20, 1960, to July 1, 1963, Capt. Jordon, as an academic instructor of the 3615th Pilot Training Group, Craig AFB, Ala., consistently demonstrated his ability to evaluate the essential elements of a problem and to arrive at a sound solution while supporting his views with logic and clarity.

He was particularly vital to the training group mission as a scheduling officer because of his superior ability to forsee problem areas and anticipate the many ramifications of classroom and flight line requirements.

ROSS HUNTER BUYS PLAY; MIKE NICHOLS TO DIRECT

HOLLYWOOD — While in England, Ross Hunter saw "The Public Eye," a one-act play by Peter Shaffer, four times, and finally succeeded in buying the film rights. It's a comedy about the romantic entanglements that ensue when a man hires a private eye to get evidence on his wife. Sounds like a natural for Cary Grant. Ross also snapped up Mike Nichols, who directed the Broadway hit, "Barefoot in the Park," to make his debut as a motion picture director for this one.

Art Linkletter can sit on a beach for three days, then he has to have action. While resting in Honolulu, he rounded up some fascinating women and tapped a TV show. Girls attending the East-West center of the University of Hawaii from all over Asia—India, Thailand, Indonesia, Nepel—dressed in their native costumes talked with Art about everything from psychology to bio-chemistry. You'll see some of the film on his House Party which racks up 19 years on TV Wednesday.

There should have been a recording machine on the table when Gloria Swanson, Merle Oberon, Bruno Pagliai, Bill Hamilton (George's brother), Earl Blackwell; and I dined at Trader Vic's. Gloria and Merle reminisced about their early experiences in movies, and I chimed in with a few. I beat both girls to Hollywood, arriving in 1915. Gloria came to town a year later.

Swanson says she was never a Mack Sennett bathing beauty, despite the legend: "I was photographed in a bathing suit and the picture went around the world. I did several comedies with Sennett. So many, in fact, that I got fed up. Cecil De Mille wanted me for a dramatic picture, but I'd already signed with someone else. I cried for 24 hours about losing out on De Mille's epic. Lucky thing I did not get it. None of the people in it were ever heard of again."

Ava Gardner did a kind act and I'd like to record it. While in town, she saw Julie Payne wearing a green Chinese dress, hauled her emerald necklace out of the vault, and loaned it to Julie.

Liz Whitney Tippett never forgets a friend. She sent me a photograph of her racing mare which she named Zasu Pitts, a beauty I hope wins a lot of races for Liz.

Aaron Spelling keeps rolling along with all-star casts for Burke's Law. The next, "Who Killed His Royal Highness," has Linda Darnell, Gale Storm, Elizabeth Montgomery, Mickey Rooney, Telly Savalas, and Bert Parks. Even Sheldon Leonard, who produces the Danny Thomas and Andy Griffith TV shows turns actor for this one. Aaron pays them $1,000 each for one day's work. That means he gets seven starts for $7,000. Smart guy? Yes!

June Levant told me Oscar survived his night out beautifully: "I always remember what Beatrice Kaufman said about her husband — 'George hated parties but hated more not being invited.' In a way, that applies to Oscar, too."

Frankie Laine says good-by to us in April to make his first far eastern tour. After concerts in Japan and Okinawa, he'll swing down to Sydney, Australia, for two weeks. His "Mule Train" record sold a million in Australia, so he should do mighty well.

Bob Walker's next will be "Temple of Gold," about a college boy, which Martin Manulis produces this summer. Bob still hasn't seen "Ensign Pulver"; is waiting for Warners to put the finishing touches on the picture which should send him straight to the top. Bob met his father-in-law for the first time when he took Ellie and the children to Maysville, Ky., over the holidays. Says he and his wife would love to do some summer stock together for the experience; was surprised when I told him how much loot Hollywood stars make on the straw-hat circuit.

The population of the world was 3,180,000,000 in mid - 1963, the Population Reference Bureau reports.

Musician Sues Doris Duke for Divorce

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Doris Duke, one of the world's wealthiest women, is the defendant in a Superior Court divorce suit filed by a jazz musician who says they were secretly married in 1956.

The complaint filed by Joseph Armand Castro Friday charged cruelty and asked $5,000 a month alimony.

Castro, 36, formerly was a band leader and instrumentalist in night spots along the Sunset Strip. His complaint said he is presently unemployed and that his last job paid only $150 a week.

The musician alleges that he and the tobacco heiress were wed in two different ceremonies—one in Providence, R.I., July 6, 1956, and the second in Philadelphia Feb. 6, 1960.

Efforts to locate Miss Duke for comment on the divorce suit were unavailing.

Orthodox Prelate Opposed to Meeting

ATHENS, Greece (AP)—Archbishop Chryssostomos, Orthodox primate of Greece, was reported today to have said his church was grieved by the Greek government's decision to allow two officials to attend the Holy Land meeting between Pope Paul VI and Patriarch Athenagoras.

A Foreign Ministry source said the archbishop expressed his distress Friday when he called on the foreign minister to discuss Pope Paul's meeting with Athenagoras, titular head of the Orthodox Church, last week.

The archbishop was believed to have interpreted the presence of the government officials as an indication of the government's stand on a religious issue.

War Symposium Group Gathers At CC Today

Statesmen, scholars, warriors and philosophers from thruout the world gather at Colorado College here today to spend a week examining the causes, conduct and consequences of World War II.

More than 1,800 man-hours went into the preparation of the symposium which features 50 separate programs. Participating will be 35 authorities from countries in Asia, Europe and the Americas, plus 40 members of the Colorado College faculty.

The symposium, regarded as the first full-scale study of World War II ever conducted by a college, was organized by Associate Dean Fred A. Sondermann, a political scientist who escaped from Nazi Germany just four days before the outbreak of the war.

During the symposium, students and faculty will join the 35 visitors in examining the politics and strategy of the war as well as war literature, war science, and war philosophy.

The symposium is open to persons outside the college community, as well as to faculty, students and staff. Altho it is being held during the first week of the second semester, attendance is not required of students.

In addition to lectures, paneis and discussion, the symposium will include more than a dozen documentary and feature movies on the war, an exhibition of German war art, and the production of Christopher Fry's wartime religious drama, "A Sleep of Prisoners."

The symposium gets under way at 11 a.m. Sunday with a special chapel service at which Loyola University (Chicago) sociology Professor Gordon Zahn will talk about "Religion and Modern War."

Among those coming to the Colorado College campus to take part in the symposium will be Telford Taylor, former U. S. chief of counsel for war crimes; British poet Stephen Spender; author and critic Dwight MacDonald; Maj. Gen. William H. Gill, commander of the Red Arrow Division in New Guinea and the Philippines during World War II: Dr. Karl Dietrich Bracher, professor of political science and modern history at the University of Bonn in Germany; Hanson Baldwin, the Pulitzer Prize winning military editor of the New York Times; Vladimir Dedijer, former professor of history at the University of Belgrade in Yugoslavia and delegate to the United Nations General Assembly; Canadian Air Marshall C. R. Slemon, now deputy commander in chief of the North American Air Defense Command (NORAD); Richard Yang, a former official in the Chinese Ministry of Education, now at Washington University; Herbert Feis, Pulitzer Prize winning historian; and University of Chicago psychology Professor Bruno Bettelheim, who has written widely on his experiences in a German concentration camp.

Lower Retail Beef Prices Are Reported

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Agriculture Department livestock market report showed today that last year's decline in beef cattle proceeds were reflected to a degree in lower retail prices.

But the retail price decline was not as much as the drop in the price farmers received for cattle. In November, for example, the wholesale price of 100 pounds of beef at major markets was $40.18 compared with $47.40 in November 1962.

The retail price in November averaged $59.50 a hundred pounds compared with $63.34 a year earlier. The spread between the wholesale and retail price last November was $19.32 a hundred pounds compared with $15.94 a year earlier.

By DORA FOSTER

Diaries of famous people often make good reading, especially if these daily records tell of travels, or if the author is gifted with the ability to write of little incidents in an interesting manner.

So, knowing that little girl of long ago could not by any stretch of the imagination be considered either talented or traveled, it is with many misgivings that she offers you her efforts at keeping a diary, but since this little black and gold book had been given to her by her father for a Christmas gift, she felt she must try to fill its pages. She began bravely enough, but it must be confessed that toward the end of the book there are many blank pages.

She lived in a ranch home on Cheyenne Creek, about three miles from Colorado Springs, and as you can see, her life was bounded by her home and her school, the little district school that was about a mile from her home. In looking over these pages one may learn somewhat of the simple life that is so foreign to the children of the present day.

The reports of many of the days were similar and so have been omitted, but the ones given are just as they were written in black ink and with a fine Spencerian pen.

"Jan. 1, 1891. I sewed all morning and in the afternoon Lucy and I went up to see the Buck girls. We stayed there till the sun went down and then we came home. Kate was down here and we gave the road to George Harding. Lou and Lottie and Harry Alward came out in the morning to skate but there was no ice.

"Jan. 7. The weather was cool almost all day and about half past 3 o'clock this afternoon it began to snow and snowed till 4. Looks like it will snow some more. All of the scholars and Miss Sharp went down to Banning's pond again today noon and some more brought their skates. I darned my mittens and stockings tonight.

"Jan. 8. It has been snowing all day and has not stopped yet. The snow was very deep to come home in from school today. George came ahead, Edna next and then all the rest of us walked in single file. We popped corn and played a game of 'Round the World With Nellie Bly' tonight. I do not know what the thermometer is.

"Jan. 10. The snow lay on the ground and did not melt much. We washed this morning but the hydrant water did not run so we carried the water from the creek. Oscar said there is a dead mule in the creek in the south canyon. Kate and Nora were both sick. They ate too much snow yesterday. We did not go to the Literary tonight, the snow was too deep. Mr. and Mrs. May came back from New York today on the 12 o'clock car.

"Jan. 12. The snow is still on the ground but melting fast. Eddie May came back to school today. We played fox and geese again today. We ironed tonight and also tried to get Harry to curl his hair with a curling iron. Think the thermometer was zero today at 6 o'clock this morning. I think I will now go to bed.

"Jan. 13. Mark set his trap to catch an animal that has been prowling around, but there was nothing in the trap this morning.

"Jan. 14. Yes, very warm. I had spring fever this morning and wished I was home. But I did not go home. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Buck celebrated their golden wedding today. Everyone of the family was there but Florence. She was sick. I hope they had a good time.

Jan. 15. Kate said they had a nice time at the wedding, yesterday. They crowned Grandma's and Grandpa's head with crowns of roses, but the old lady said she felt like a goose. Mr. Buck would not wear his but a short time. He soon took the crown off.

Jan. 17. Kate wanted a chance to knit on her Mother's sape so she came down here in the evening and knit. So Nora and Oscar and Kate came down and we played games. Kate knit, and finally we all turned out to pull honey taffy. Harry was here too and I do wish that Mother would get him his little drum so as to keep him quiet. He drums on every chair or table in the house.

"Jan. 19. Mrs. May gave Edith and me each a pair of rubbers, and gave Mother three tidys for us to work with colored linen.

"Jan. 23. It was warm all day but there was snow on the ground. We played fox and geese today and had a nice ring. The moon shines bright and the stars give the light and the evening invites me astray. But tonight I am to stay at home and go to bed at the proper time.

"Jan. 26. The electric carmen struck today. Their wages was $50 a month and Mr. Barnes and Lawton wanted to cut them down to $45. The men would not run the cars nor let anyone else run them. Mother and Lucy took Helen over to Old Town in the wagon. I have not heard whether the men have it settled about their wages yet or not. We skated on the pond again today but the snow was quite deep.

"Jan. 27. The carmen got the wages they wanted and this morning are running the cars again.

"Feb. 14. A peddler came today noon while we were eating dinner and sold us a receipt for starting a fire. The price was 50 cents. Mark thinks he might gain 15 minutes every morning by having an easy way of starting a fire every day. We can use chips when we are not in a hurry.

"Feb. 25. Miss Sharp lets Rosie set with me now for she and Fannie fight so that they cannot sit together. I don't know how long I can stand her with me.

"March 1. Amanda Seyffert has the measles. She broke out last night. If I am going to have them I hope I will get thru with it so I can say I have had them and got rid of them.

"March 5. It was a trifle snowy today, and Mark tried to shoot some ducks but he only wounded one. Mr. May then killed it.

"March 10. Lou and Fred were out today and after dark Mark and Fred went to town for his wagon that Mark had left at the blacksmith's shop but down at Seyffert's place the wheel got hot so he left it there in the road until he could take it back to town.

"March 11. I know of nothing to tell today only Vi Pearcy has the measles.

"March 12. The weather turned out quite warm today. I have not had the measles yet.

"March 18. Edith's Columbo is learning to drink. I am sewing on my new calico dress. Mother and Lucy knocked the stove over tonight.

"March 21. Today was as nice as it could possibly be. Tonight was Literary night. Harry Jones read his paper and it was very silly. Josie has the chicken pox.

"March 28. Edith Buck has the measles. The roads are as muddy as they can be.

"April 1. Today is the first day of April. Mark, Oscar, and father ate some salted cookies. Helen drank some salted milk."

If our readers have followed this so far they might wish to know that the Lou, mentioned was Miss Lulu Thomas, later Mrs. Fred Crissey; the Lottie was Miss Lottie Pearsin, later Mrs. C. Alward; the wedding was in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Buck, the parents of Isreal and Fred Buck, who were living on the ranch, now the property owned by Prof. and Mrs. Delmer Rodabaugh, 905 W. Cheyenne Rd.

Oscar Lincoln was a cousin of the Buck girls, his mother a sister, Mrs. I. P. Buck.

Harry Hayman was a neighbor; Mrs. May was Mrs. James J. May, who was the first owner and founder of the Mayhurst Hotel on West Cheyenne Road. Vi Pearcy was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Pearcy and an aunt of the one-time well-known athlete of Colorado College, Roy Gray, better known as Dollie Gray.

Miss Pearcy lived with her parents in a cottage about a quarter of a mile east of the Seven Falls. There were two May boys, George and Eddie.

As for Edith's Columbo, I have no idea, unless it was a calf she was teaching to drink milk from a pail and as for Mother and Lucy knocking the stove over it must have been some joke we had on them, since none of the members of the family ever indulged in such amusements. It may have been that while they were near that one section of the stovepipe became separated at the joint, as such things sometimes happened in those days.

"Giving George the road" meant that when we saw him coming we hid in the bushes by the roadside until he had gone by.

CU Receives $7,000 Nursing Grant

A severe shortage of nursing instructors in the United States has resulted in a $7,332.69 grant for the University of Colorado School of Nursing's graduate program.

The grant was made Wednesday by the National Fund for Graduate Nursing Education, a private organization founded in 1961.

It was one of 32 totaling $200,000, announced George F. Smith, president of the fund. Disbursements by the national organization have totaled $450,00 since 1961.

Purpose of the program is to provide more teachers for nursing schools. "Last year alone, more than 1,400 budgeted positions could not be filled," Smith said. "This situation is particularly serious when we are facing a nurse shortage of more than 20 per cent in our nation's hospitals."

CU will use the money to supplement regular budgeted funds Dean Henrietta Loughran said.

Your Outdoors

By MARY L. SHIRER
For the Pikes Peak Group of the Colorado Mountain Club

A MASTERFUL WOODCHOPPER

There was a certain rather small animal weighing not more than 40 pounds that played a very important part in early civilization of our country, so important that it really shaped the destiny of the great west. After the eastern part of the United States became thoroly searched for this little animal, they heard of the wild region west of the Mississippi and the great abundance of these animals in this part of the country. Trappers made their way across the boundless prairies and into the innermost recesses of the mountain wilderness, slaying what opposed their way, taking this animal by the thousands and tens of thousands and sending pack upon pack by way of St. Louis to the waiting markets of the old world.

One enterprising man who having employed a band of expert trappers came out of a far regions on one occasion with nearly 200 packs each worth $1,000. In one period of two and one half years, more than 600,000 skins were sent by one of the great companies. Thus the animal became responsible for the first great opening of the great western unknown and we should know some of the remarkable characteristics of this creature which performed such a prominent part in affairs so momentous to American republic and to the world. A house builder and an engineer this animal has constructed comfortable lodges. Excavated canals for its convenience and formed ponds and lakes of considerable extent by means of dams made of trees, sticks, mud and stones. The trees were felled by its own efforts and cut up into pieces suitable for the object desired. The mud and stones were then combined with these pieces with dexterity that is astonishing.

Its paws are supplied with long strong paws, the hind one having an extra claw. The front ones are small and are used deftly like human hands and the animal can walk erect, on hind feet, carrying and can drag poles, sticks, stones and earth for house and dam building. When cutting down a tree, they stand on their hind legs, supported by the tail, two working at one tree. They begin, about eight inches above the base and they cut around and around, making successive cut deeper, and chips thrown off being some three inches in length showing the clean strokes of the teeth. A tree of considerable size is felled in two or three nights. On mountain streams, dams are built one above another transforming them for long distances into a series of pools.

In spite of early devastation of this animal, there still remains quite a few scattered around the mountains. They are difficult to see for they work mostly at night. Farmers claim they are destructive and many are destroyed. It is said when trying to escape from a trap, they would gnaw their own leg off. We must give them credit for their great intelligence. Those strong webbed feet hind feet, broad tail and sharp teeth are their implements. It is said that when an old beaver has escaped from trap, he could not be caught again for he carried a stick in his mouth with which to test suspicious places.

URGES ABOLISHMENT

DENVER (UPI)—State Education Commissioner Byron Hansford has urged that the five-member State Board for Vocational Education be abolished. Department officials proposed that the 60-year-old board be replaced with a nine-member advisory committee on Vocational Education, directly responsible to the commissioner. Hansford says much of the work of the board is a duplication of that done by the State Board of Education.

Union Will Seek Longer Vacations

DENVER (AP) — Longer vacations, free hospital and medical insurance and improved pension plans are among benefits the Oil & Chemical and Atomic Workers Union (AFL-CIO) is seeking in a drive for new contracts with the oil industry.

The union will ask that an amount equal to five per cent of present wages be applied to benefits, said O. A. (Jack) Knight, president.

Nearly all oil industry concontracts will be open for negotiation by June 30, Knight said. The 17-member national bargaining policy committee decided on the goals at a meeting here this week.

The union will ask that employers pay the full cost of hospital and medical insurance, which in most cases now is partly paid for by employes.

The organization will seek a clause in each contract forbidding employers to lay off employes without 60 days' notice to the union.

Another goal is a provision that employes with two years' service be trained for other jobs if theirs are eliminated, and that they be guaranteed work for a period equal to the length of their service up to five years.

Extra severance pay for those laid off is also sought.

Central Defeats Wasson To Capture Lead in SCL

By TOM CUSHMAN
Gazette Tel3graph Sports Writer

PUEBLO — Pueblo Central's crack gunners were on target as usual here Saturday night and youthful Wasson was the unfortunate target as the jet-quick Wildcats took over undisputed possession of first place in the South Central League with an 83-57 blasting of the Colorado Springs club.

Central's triumph, its third straight in conference campaigning and seventh without a loss this season, moved the SCL favorites out front in this winters' race for the first time. Grand Junction, previously tied for the top spot, suffered a 66-52 loss to Pueblo South in a battle on the Western Slope. The loss dropped the Tigers into a three way tie for the runner-up slot with South and Centennial.

For Wasson, the defeat was the fourth straight and it left the Thunderbirds alone in the conference cellar with an 0-3 mark. Wasson is now 2-5 overall.

Central, with ace marksman Rick Shelton arching in 26 points, trailed only briefly in the opening quarter before its devastating fast break gained momentum and gradually broke the contest open in the second half. The deadly-shooting Shelton hit 11 of 17 tosses from the floor and contributed the key points that got the Wildcat machine rolling after a heckling Wasson defense had applied the clamps for the first eight minutes.

Shelton was joined in the double figures bracket by C. D. Bodam with 15 points and lithe Bob Pratt with 13. Pratt, who had been sidelined by a siege of flu thru much of the week, was not in the starting lineup but was hustled into action early when it appeared as tho the T-Birds might be mustering a serious threat. His presence immediately established control of the backboards for the Pueblo team and hastened the Wasson downfall.

The T-Birds, despite the loss, showed improvement in some areas over recent performances but still had problem establishing contact with the basket. Wasson hit just 30.9 per cent of its attempts from the floor while the 'Cats were shotting at a brilliant 54.7 clip.

Senior guard John Wickham topped the Wasson scoring with 12 points before fouling out in the fourth period. Junior Charlie Steel, who turned in a strong second half, followed with 11 and turned in the best job of any Thunderbird on the backboards.

The T-Birds, who scrapped their own version of the running game for this contest, had the Wildcats in trouble in the early going with their slow - paced style and tenacious defense. The advent of Price quickly reversed the backboard control, however, and by early in the second half the 'Cats had Wasson caught up in their own fast-moving game, a pattern for which the T-Birds inexperience left them ill-equipped.

The contest was also sprinkled with the all-too-frequent histronics of the officials who, at times, appeared to be performing for television cameras which were taping the battle for a later broadcast. The numerous infractions were often accompanied by the mugging and sweeping gestures of actor - official John Badway in a sidelight which is becoming an all too frequent part of SCL action.

The game was tight during most of the first period with Wasson holding a brief 8-6 lead after a Wickham basket. The T-Birds still trailed only 14-13 with 1:23 to go but a pair of buckets by Price and Jim Gross shot the Wildcats into an 18-13 advantage at the first break.

Central gradually stretched the lead to 10 points by midway in the second period and had a comfortable 36-23 margin to talk over at halftime. It was a 20 point bulge before the third quarter was over and the Wildcats coasted in with reserves occupying the floor for much of the late action.

Wasson returns to the same floor for its next start, meeting Pueblo East here Friday night.

Nodaks Nip Tigers, 5-3

GRAND FORKS, N.D. — Fighting off injuries which forced Coach Bob Johnson to juggle his entire team in the midst of the game, as well as the bitter cold and a battling Sioux squad, Colorado College lost its second straight game to the University of North Dakota here Saturday night, 5-3.

Despite a second period shake-up which at one time left the Tigers playing with only seven forwards instead of the normal three lines of nine men, North Dakota was forced to bust loose from a 3-3 tie early in the third period to take its second Western Collegiate Hockey Association victory of the season.

Two goals authored by senior Johnny Simus in the span of nine seconds brought on the deadlock in the first minute of action in the final period. However, North Dakota's Granger Evans scored for the winners only 15 seconds later and the Nodaks added one more to ice away the game.

In Friday night's 7-2 loss here by Colorado College, the Tigers lost the services of winger Wayne McAlpine as he suffered a concussion in a collision. Thus CC pressed spare defenseman Dave Palm onto a forward line for Saturday's game.

However, the trouble was just beginning. Midway thru the second period Palm was felled by another concussion as the Nodaks' Bill Borlase was penalized for charging and this cut the number of available forwards to eight. And later in the period spunky little Roger Simon was hit by a high pass and had to leave the ice to receive stitches.

That forced CC to play with only two lines which were not used to working together, but still they put up a furious battle to stay close. Then in the third and final period, Simon returned and alternated between forward and defense in a workhorse role to draw the vote as the most valuable player on the ice.

This seemed to spark the Tigers and Simus came thru with his two quick goals to tie the score with only 57 seconds gone in the final frame. But Evans bolted the Nodaks back into the lead and then sophomore winger Jim Dixon fired in the last tally with 7:41 gone.

Colorado College took a brief 1-0 lead in the first period on a goal by Jeff Sauer after feeds from Palm and Steve Ebert. Then Sioux wing Don Stokaluk tied it and Will Sterett pushed it to 2-1 in favor of the home team.

The lone tally of the second period came with less than three minutes to go when Roy Davidson got one past goalie Art Warwick, altho the entire stanza was filled with fast and furious action with the two CC players having to leave the game because of injuries.

Warwick, despite the loss, had another sensational night in the nets by turning back 36 shots from the Nodaks. Sioux goalie Joe Lech had 20 stops in a game that was much closer thruout than the Friday night opener.

The defeat left CC with a 1-2 record in league play and 7-5 overall for the season. North Dakota has a 2-1-1 WCHA record and has a 5-3-1 overall mark.

The road-weary Tigers will now return to Colorado Springs after seven straight games away. The next game on the schedule is next Saturday night in the Springs against the CC Alumni.

Mines' Tankers Top Western

GUNNISON, Colo. (UPI) — Colorado School of Mines, perennially a strong swimming team Saturday swamped surprisingly strong Western State College 51 to 43.

The Mines team won 7 of 11 events in toppling the Gunnison school, now in only its second year of swimming competition. It was the first meet for both teams.

Who'll Laugh Last?

As any wallflower at the Junior Prom will tell you, there's nothing worse than to be insulted by omission. In the same vein, it was had to bypass the obvious slap in the face Colorado College's hockey program received this past week in one of the sheets up the street.

Denver University's Murray Armstrong, who in the past few years has proved to be a recruiter supreme, annually departs from most coaches' philosophy and puts reverse English on his predictions for his Pioneers. Instead of whipping out the crying towel with advance excuses for could-be defeats like most of his cohorts, the suave DU coach sees nothing but success.

There are few who take exception to Armstrong's early boasts, for nearly every time he's backed up his big words with plenty of goals from his imports from across the northern border.

In the latest epistle obviously dictated to one of the members of the Denver fourth estate, Murray went along with the opinion of the majority of the other coaches in the Western Collegiate Hockey Assocation by also prognosticating his Pioneers would win the league and also the national title which invariably goes to the best in the west.

This year, of course, DU has a little more going for them besides the usual talent it takes for this egotism. After this weekend at Michigan Tech, the only other time the Pioneers have to leave the DU Arena is for a one night stand here at Colorado Springs. So along with that home ice advantage in the league, and with the national championships slated in Denver, it doesn't take such great foresight to make such a prediction after all.

There's certainly no disagreement here as to Denver's title chances.

What really digs, however, is the apparent intentional omission of Colorado College in a couple of cracks by the knowledgeable coach.

The first was in reference to the farce the league has become, which is certainly true. But after stating that "only three of seven of the league's teams will play DU," Armstrong went on to say that "there's not a team in the league that will play all the other teams."

Now Murray knows full well this is not so for as many times as he's been perched in the press box of the Broadmoor World Arena already this season scouting Colorado College, I'm sure he's well acquainted with the CC schedule which includes games against all six of the other WCHA teams.

Granted, CC is the only team in the league which will play all others — and that proves the farce of which Armstrong was speaking — but there is the one exception to his statement . . .and he knew it.

The other point Murray made

JOHN MARIUCCI

was that he sees the time when the Big Ten schools will form their own league (but he failed to add that the main reason was to get away from Denver and her current philosophy). Then he went on to say "I'd like to see a new league formed that would include DU, maybe Gonzaga, Michigan Tech and North Dakota. He also included that BYU, Tulsa, Nebraska and Arizona State at Tempe are "thinking" about hockey teams.

Here, again, it was quite obvious Armstrong was omitting Denver's nearest neighbor. Only a few short weeks ago (the second week in December to be exact) Murray made his first plea for such a new league, but at that time the Tigers were among the first considered.

After talking with Colorado College officials, it seems that DU has yet to approach the local school on this idea. We surmise he already knows the answer.

CC's new coach, Bob Johnson, said recently that he checked rather thoroly into the future of the league and the status of the club here before ever accepting the position last spring.

Coming from Minnesota, the most logical place for Johnson to inquire was at the University of Minnesota, whose coach John Mariucci actually was the ring-leader in the current boycott of Denver by all the Big Ten schools. And the person he felt would give him the straight scoop was Marsh Ryman, athletic director at the school.

"Marsh told me that as far as he could see, Colorado College would always be included in the league, no matter how it was set up in the future. As long as CC continued a philosophy which is in line with the rest of the schools involved they will be able to play," Johnson said of the conversation between himself and Ryman.

It was also shown in recent days that any intention of the Big Ten schools forming a league by themselves without such "outsiders" as CC, Michigan Tech or others, may be further off than Armstrong and some would believe. This season the Tigers were scheduled to play a game each with Ohio State and Ohio University — State being in the Big Ten.

But after Ohio U. whipped the Buckeyes by some horridious count like 15-1, former CC mentor Tom Bedecki now trying to build a team at State, backed off from the original schedule rather than being embarrassed by his old school. Then the Tigers went ahead and trounced Ohio U., 10-6 and 10-1.

This was a sure indication that Ohio State and some of the other teams in the Big Ten forming varsity teams are not quite ready for the big time of the WCHA.

What Armstrong and his DU friends have tried to hide from the public is the reason these teams have slapped a ban on scheduling in the Mile High City. He would make it out that it's purely because he has Canadians on the squad, but this isn't so because others (including CC) have at least a few of the aliens.

It is rather the attitude of trying to build a semi-professional team against which there is little chance of victory. By using so many who have played for pay in a country which has different amateur standards than ourselves, he has created a monster that downgrades its opponents and cuts deeply into fan interest with lop-sided games.

If all at DU fail to recognize this, the school is hardly worthy of the name educational institution.

It's quite plain that in certain corners the league has gotten away from itself; away from the basic idea of any college sport which should be played by the students who naturally would attend the school. When only three on a roster of 25 are from the United States and the campus is located as far from the Canadian border as Denver, it's hardly a cross-section of the students.

As to the future, Denver may very well be completely excluded from the Western league by as early as next year. That's why Murray's been pressing the old panic button for a new loop to start. At any rate, it should be quite a meeting when the league members get together this spring.

Only because Denver was to host the NCAA championships this winter were the Pioneers allowed to be eligible for the title altho playing less than the normal minimum number of league games. If they continue the exception next season then the league will really be a farce.

But if Denver breaks away, there's no guarantee that Michigan Tech or North Dakota will go with her. Tech would have much too far to travel if it could play no more games in Michigan and surrounding states, and North Dakota has also shown compromise with the rest of the members with 11 members of the freshman team from the U.S.

And if DU was left playing the likes of Gonzaga, BYU, Tulsa or Arizona State, soon even the rabid fans in Denver would tire of seeing runaway scores — and hockey could easily go the same route as football at the capital city's school. Professional hockey has made a great many fans in the city this year, and dull contests against outclassed opposition would be all it takes to swing over many more.

Motely Sets Record At K of C Track Meet

BOSTON (UPI)—Yale senior Wendell Motley of Trinidad ran to a surprise indoor record at the 500-yard distance Saturday night to launch the 38th Knights of Columbus track meet.

The 22-year-old Motley completely dominated a field limited to New England collegians.

He was smashing the indoor record by nine-tenths of a second at 55.5 seconds. The 56.4 second mark was first set by Herb McKenley of Chicago in 1947 and matched by Charlie Jenkins in 1956 and George Kerr in 1960.

"I've been pointing for the record for a long time," the perfectly calm Motley said. "I just missed it last year, but it makes a good start for this year."

Unbeaten Hayes Jones ran away with the 45-yard high hurdles test for his 47th consecutive victory in another early K-of-C event.

The veteran Jones, running for the Detroit Varsity Club, matched meet and Boston Garden records of 5.5 seconds while scoring a convincing two yard victory over Villanova student Larry Livers.

Fordham student Sam Pery of Passaic, N. J., upset Gerry Ashworth and a large field with a near-record 5.3 second victory in the 50-yard dash finals. Former Dartmouth student Ashworth just missed with a spurt at the tape as Perry finished one-tenth of a second off Frank Budd's three-year-old meet and Garden record.

Jayhawks Bombard CU, 73-55

BOULDER, Colo. (AP)—Kansas, hitting better than half its field shots, rolled to a 42-19 halftime lead that assured the Jayhawks' 73-55 Big Eight basketball victory over Colorado Saturday.

While Kansas was hitting 15-of 24 shots from the field in the first half, Colorado, surprise winner over K-State earlier this week, connected on only 9-of-28.

George Unseld, the game's leader with 24 points, and Steve Renko each bagged 12 points in KU's first half surge.

For the game, Kansas shot 53 per cent from the field and Colorado 34. Colorado, although beaten on the boards in the first half, cleared most of the second half rebounds to hold a game edge of 46-45.

The result gave Colorado a 1-1 league record and KU 1-2.

Academy High Loses Non-Leaguer

DENVER — Host team Cherry Creek presented John Delventhal's pesky Air Academy High team with a 57-41 loss Saturday night in non-league play.

The Class AA home team managed to pull out the victory in the last half mostly on free throws as Cherry Creek made good in 21 of 27 charity tosses.

For the Kadets, Bill Culver and Lance Jensen were high scorers with nine points each. This was the Big Blue's eighth loss of the season with only one victory to their credit.

Altho the Kadets managed to stay within striking distance of the larger school at the conclusion of the first half, 22-18, the Cherry Creek aggregation outscored their visitors in the latter half.

Wasson Matmen Clip South

DENVER — Wasson's youth-dominated wrestling team pinned a 23-16 defeat on South Denver here this afternoon for its second dual meet victory of the campaign.

The Thunderbirds, who have shown continual improvement in recent matches, won at seven of the 12 weights and had a draw at 165 pounds where Yogi Grandcourt and Paul Kochiovelos of South each finished with three points.

Terry Remy got the T-Birds away in the 95 pound match by posting a 5-2 decision over Dwight Frankfather of South. The Rebels won the following two weights, both on decisions but Clif Catron got the 'Birds rolling again with a 9-0 decision at 120.

South's Bob Bauman pinned Dennis Osbourn of Wasson in three minutes in the 127 pound match to give the Rebels a 11-6 lead but from that point the Thunderbirds dominated the proceedings. Tim Ives, Chip Summers, Vaughn Langman, Keith Campbell, and Yogi Grandcourt gave Wasson five straight decisions before sophomore Bud Hoffpauir was defeated in the 180 pound match. Bob McConnell, another sophomore, then decisioned Jerry Williams in the heavyweight contest.

Even with their convincing victory, the T-Birds were wrestling without two regulars. Jim Ranals at 112 and Tom Hurley at 127 were not in the lineup. Wasson lost at both weights.

The Thunderbirds' next action is Friday and Saturday when the team travels to the Western Slope to meet powerful squads from Fruita and Montrose.

Nebraska Nips Missouri

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Surprising Nebraska made it two wins without a loss in the Big Eight conference by stopping Missouri 74-69 in overtime Saturday night.

The Huskers used the 19-point shooting of Coley Webb, a 6-5 sophomore, to hand the Tigers their first league reversal in two outings. Nebraska is 3-9 for the season, Missouri 7-4.

Nebraska managed a 37-33 halftime advantage and improved the advantage to 12 points before Missouri shooters found the range.

Del Norte Tops Leadville

DEL NORTE — The home team blasted out a 64-36 non-league victory over Leadville, Saturday night.

After compiling a comfortable 33-12 halftime margin, Del Norte polished off the Panthers. Jack Hosley pumped in 17 points for the Leadville crew which was high for both teams.

Adams State Sweeps Twin Bill From CC

By LOY HOLMAN

Gazette Telegraph Sports Editor

Adams State College's pre-season favorites in the Rocky Mountain Conference raced to their second straight league win at the expense of Colorado College, 76-60, to jump into a tie for the RMC lead Saturday night at the City Auditorium.

CC's multiple floor mistakes, which cost several opportunities to score against the bulky Indians from Alamosa, and the inability to keep the big invaders from crowding for close shots with the basket rim at their finger-tips were the main factors in the game.

However, even had Coach Red Eastlack's improving Tigers been at their best it's doubtful they could had matched the muscle Adams State has on this year's team. CC missed on 15 attempts at the free throw line, which definitely was a factor, and was slightly off on their shooting percentage with only 20 conversions in 50 tries, but the final difference probably could have been even higher had not the Indians stalled out much of the second half after leading thruout.

Big Bob Kincaid, a 230-pound mass of humanity, paced five Adams State players who all had double figure totals. Kincaid, who seldom attempted a shot from more than two feet from the rim, dumped in 17 points and made good five of only eight attempts.

Others scoring highly for the Indians were Kent Layton with 15, Dick Buck and Willie Davis each with 14 and Lonnie Porter with 10. Last year Porter was the team's leading scorer and an All-Conference selection, but he was far off target Saturday in netting only two of a dozen tries.

Bob Heiny paced the Tigers with 20 points, but he had little other help from a long list of teammates with only Farrell (Chief) Howell in doubles with 11 points.

The Tigers fell behind right at the start of the contest altho Heiny gave them the initial lead with the opening bucket. CC was so cold from the field in the first 20 minutes that they only had five goals by the intermission. The only thing that kept them in the game at all was the constant fouling of Adams as CC pushed in 13 free throws.

Before it was over three of the invaders fouled out of the game, but this didn't come until it was far too late for the Bengals to take advantage of the situation. As the teams changed ends of the court at halftime, the fouls seemed to stick with the north end of the City Aud and CC began to pick up the infractions which hurt their comeback cause.

It took the Tigers nearly five minutes into the contest before they could connect on a second fielder and by that time the Indians had stretched the lead to six points. A-State quickly moved with the first half about half over and the lead remained that much for nearly the remainder of the game.

Trailing by 11 at halftime, the Tigers came back onto the floor with a much better accuracy, but it did little good in trimming the margin as Adams kept pace by trading goals. Howell made good three straight shots from a variety of angles during this brief period of torrid shooting but the Indians responded by merely feeding their big men under the basket.

The nearest CC could ever climb was to within 10 points of the visitors with Howell canning a pair of free throws to bring the score to 68-58 with a minute and a half remaining. However, Buck started scorching the nets in the final minute of play to lay in four straight baskets to pad the final margin.

This two game series this weekend was the first RMC action for both teams and naturally dropped CC to the bottom of the standings while sending the Indians to the top. Overall, A-State now has a 6-4 record and Colorado College has yet to win in four outings.

The next action for CC will be this coming Tuesday night when they'll travel to Golden to meet traditional rival Colorado Mines. And then next weekend the Bengals will travel again in testing surprisingly strong Colorado State College at Greeley next Friday and Saturday nights.

WHAT'S THE GAME, HERE?—It may look like Colorado College and Adams State College are playing ring-around-the-rosie in this scene from the series between the two Rocky Mountain Conference teams this weekend at the City Auditorium. However, they were just trying to find the elusive sphere. If you need help finding it look, Adams State foreward Kent Layton (42) has the ball behind him. Others are Dave Herrington (23) and Steve "Bashful" Sabom (41) from CC, and Everett Trueblood of Adams State.

Falcons Wallop Montana

MISSOULA (AP) — Air Force Academy Falcons scored 46 per cent of their field goal tries in the first half and went on to post a 74-56 win-as-you-please basketball victory over Montana State University Saturday night.

The Falcons took a 2-0 lead on Scott Etnyre's jump shot seconds after play opened. Mike Pavich followed with a quick layin and Rich Porter added another field goal to shove the Cadets ahead 6-0.

Air Force, now 6-5 for the season, led 36-17 at halftime. Pavich scored 11 points in the first half to give the Falcons their comfortable margin.

Montana came back with five straight points to start the second half, but then the Air Force found the basket again.

Johnny Judd, a 5-foot-8 senior guard, scored 18 points to pace Air Force scoring. Pavich hit 17 and Porter 10.

Montana was led by Tim Aldrich, senior guard, with 13 points. Bill Rice, a 6-foot-5 junior, counted 10 for MSU.

Air Force hit 26 of 63 field goal attempts for 41 per cent. Montana scored on 21 of 55 for 40 per cent.

NO, NO, NOT THAT SIDE—Colorado College's Bob Heiny (33) and Adams State College's Kent Layton seem to be trying to get the ball thru the hoop on the wrong side of the backboard during action in this weekend's series at the City Auditorium. Actually, the ball had bounced over the top of the board and they were waiting for it to come down. The spare foot at right belongs to an unidentified Adams State player behind Heiny.

60,000 Expected to View NFL All-Pro Football Game Today

By CHARLES MAHER
Associated Press Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Western Conference squad with only a few players from the West and an Eastern Conference team without the leading passer in the East meet Sunday in the 14th annual National Football League Pro Bowl game.

A crowd of at least 60,000 is expected to view the all-star event at Memorial Colsieum. The game starts at 4 p.m. EST and will be televised nationally by NBC.

The West, which holds an 8-to-5 edge in the series, is favored by a touchdown. The guess is that the spread might be less if the East had quarterback Y. A. Tittle. The brilliant New York passer was scratched because of a knee injury suffered Dec. 29, when the Giants lost the NFL title game to the Chicago Bears, 14-10.

Of the 34 players on the Western squad, only five are from the two Far West franchises, San Francisco and Los Angles. Twenty-four are from the four Midwestern teams and five others are from that typically Western frontier town of Chesapeake Bay, Baltimore.

Since no title is a stake, the suspicion has grown that players approach the Pro Bowl game with less enthusiasm than they would a more momentous occasion, such as Sunday dinner.

But the series has produced some fine games. Three have been decided by one point, six by a touchdown or less.

This year, to help the players concentrate, the East coach, Allie Sherman of New York and the West coach, George Halas of Chicago, barred the public from workouts. It was the first time both Pro Bowl squads sought such privacy.

Norman Snead of Washington was picked to replace Tittle on the Eastern roster, but Charley Johnson of St. Louis is expected to be the East's starting quarterback. Jim Brown of Cleveland will be the starting fullback; Tim Brown of Philadelphis is likely to start at halfback and Frank Gifford of New York will be the flanker. Gifford replaces Buddy Dial of Pittsburgh, who injured a knee in practice.

For the West, it will be Johnns Unitas of Baltimore at quarterback, Jim Taylor of Green Bay at fullback, Tommy Mason of Minnesota at halfback and Terry Barr of Detroit at flanker. Bill Wade of Chicago is the West's second quarterback.

Wade was the winning pitcher in the title game, and is one of eight Bears on the West team. The runner-up Packers, who battered the Browns 40-23 in the Playoff Bowl at Miami last Sunday, also placed eight.

The Giants have six players on the East squad after Tittle's defection, and four of them are defensive men, linemen Jim Katcavage and John LeVetere and halfback Erich Barnes and Dick Lynch.

Unitas has quarterbacked the West team for seven straight years, and was named the games's outstanding player in 1960 and 1961. In addition to Barr, Unitas will have such passing targets as John Mackey of the Colts, Mike Ditka of the Bears, Gail Cogdill of the Lions and Ray Berry of the Colts.

Johnson will have Del Shofner, Tittle's sidekick, Lee Folkins of the Cowboys, Pete Retzlaff of the Eagles and Bobby Mitchell of the Redskins. He can also throw to Jim Brown, who has frequently been superb in this game.

Molterer Wins Ski Title at Vail

VAIL, Colo. (AP) — Anderl Molterer, former Austrian star now based at Aspen, Colo., swept to a wide victory Saturday in the dual slalom competition of the North American Professional Ski Championships.

Molterer swung down two separate slalom courses, each with about 100 gates, in a combined time of 2 minutes 20.1 seconds to easily outdistance his countryman, runnerup Ernst Hinterseer, also now of Aspen, who was clocked in 2:24.4.

In the dual slalom, two skiers raced down parallel courses in man-to-man competition as well as against time. The courses dropped 750 feet.

Light snow and extreme cold cut the number of spectators to about 500.

Four racers were disqualified because they missed gates or fell near the finish and failed to complete the run. They were Pepi Gramshammer of Vail, Hans Schwarz, Medicine Bow, Wyo., Eric Sailer, Mt. Hood, Ore., and Sigurd Rockne, Breckenridge, Colo.

The skiers, all members of the International Professional Ski Racers Association, will compete in a downhill race starting at noon Sunday.

NCAA to Vote on Unlimited Substitution Rule Today

By BEN FUNK
Associated Press Sports Writer

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP)—A new college football substitution rule that may be liberal enough to satisfy even the coaches appears to be in the cards for next season.

The Football Rules Committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association wrestled with the problem Saturday at the opening of its three - day meeting. Chairman Ivan Williamson of Wisconsin said a final vote probably would be taken Sunday.

Numerous proposals were offered. They ranged from minor revisions to the recommendation of the American Football Coaches Association for a return to the unlimited substitution that existed prior to 1952.

Williamson appointed a subcommittee to study all the ideas. It came back with a variety of proposals that were amended.

Then the subcommittee went back out and returned with a more specific plan.

Details were not released but Jack Curtice, rules chairman of the football coaches group, said the plan if passed would be "reasonably satisfactory" to the coaches.

It appeared that the rule when it is finally hammered out will represent a compromise between the wishes of the coaches and those who want to go easy on rule revision.

Arkansas Scores Win Over Texas Christian

FORT WORTH (UPI) — Arkansas took advantage of a 10-minute Texas Christian scoring drought Saturday to down the Horned Frogs 66-60 in a Southwest Conference basketball game.

Arkansas, which took an eight point lead early in the game, fell behind a determined TCU team and was trailed at halftime 35-33. Rollie Cornish hit four points in the final minute of the first half to give the Froggies the halftime lead.

TCU, which remains winless in three conference outings, jumped to an eight point lead, 41-33 early in the second half when Arkansas went six and a half minutes without scoring.

But TCU took its turn at not hitting the bucket and after 10 minutes the Frogs found themselves tied up 43-43. Arkansas never trailed from that point. Archie Clayton, 6-foot 10-inch center for TCU, fouled out of the game with 10:40 left.

High point man for Razorbacks, who hit a cool 38 per cent of their shots, was Jim Magness with 22 points. Scoring honors for TCU, who hit a cooler 31.4 per cent, went to Gary Turner with 20 points.

SMU Records Victory Over Rice, 92-76

DALLAS (UPI) — Gene Elmore and Bill Ward split 46 points between them Saturday night to lead Southern Methodist to a 92-76 victory over the Rice Owls and leave Texas A&M the undisputed Southwest Conference leader.

Elmore collected 24 points while Ward hit 16 of 17 free throws en route to a 22-point night and three other Mustangs SMU handed the Owls their first conference loss in three starts.

Kendall Rhine, the conference's leading scorer with a 23.6 average, managed to hold that pace but most of his 24 points for the night came after SMU had built up a comfortable 47-32 first half lead. The 6-10 Rice star had a miserable night at the free throw line and sank only four of 14 efforts.

SMU, which won its second of three league starts, went ahead to stay at 18-17 midway through the first quarter and steadily pulled away as Rice hit only 34.3 per cent of its first half shots to 42.6 per cent accuracy for the Mustangs.

Pedigo Named Broadmoor Assistant Golf Pro

One of the country's leading golf professionals, Roger Pedigo, has joined the Broadmoor Golf Club staff as an associate instructor it was announced today by Broadmoor's head pro Dow Finsterwald.

Pedigo, a Class A member of the Professional Golfer's Association, comes to Broadmoor from the Country Club of Miami where he has been associated with Arnold Palmer since 1961. Prior to that he was head pro at the Westwood Country Club in St. Louis, Mo., a position he asumed in 1955.

Both Finsterwald and Pedigo grew up in Athens, Ohio, and attended Ohio University where they played golf together on the University Team.

A pre-med course at Ohio led to a commission as first lieutenant in the Medical Corps for Pedigo after graduation. He spent 20 months in Europe during the Korean War and while there won the 7th Army Golf Tournament and was runner-up in the Army's All European Tournament.

Back in the United States after the war, he joined Elsworth Vines at Inwood Country Club on Long Island, N.Y., as a teaching pro. From there he went to St. Louis to succeed Ed Furgol as head pro at Westwood.

Pedigo still holds the course record at Inwood, an eight under par 64, which he set in the club's annual Pro-Pro Member Tournament in 1954.

Most recent professional tour made by Pedigo was in 1960 when he played in 15 tournaments beginning with the Bing Crosby Tournament at Pebble Beach and ending with the Motor City Open in Detroit. That same year he played the Caribbean tour which took him to Panama, Maracaibo, San Juan, Caracas and Kingston.

"His ability as one of the top teachers of the game will make him a distinct asset to our club," Finsterwald said in announcing the appointment.

Art Wall Forges Ahead To Lead San Diego Open

By BOB MYERS
Associated Press Sports Writer

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP)—Art Wall Jr., regaining his touch on the final nine holes, forged into a two-stroke lead in the third round of the $30,000 San Diego Open Golf Tournament Saturday with a two-under-par 68 and a 54-hole score of 204.

The 40-year-old veteran toured the par 35-35—70 Rancho Bernardo Country Club course in bright, windy weather in 36-32—68.

Two strokes back was the erstwhile pace-setter, Bob Rosburg, with a 71. Gene Littler, with a 72, was alone at 207.

Tommy Bolt, who went into the round tied for first place with Littler and Rosburg, encountered a stormy experience on the 17th hole when he went out of bounds and wound up wit a three-over-par 8. It gave the tempestuous Bolt a 78 and a total of 213.

Bolt withdrew from the tournament after the round. He had a badly swollen right arm and will not play in the Bing Crosby Tournament next week.

Arnold Palmer, who again attracted the largest gallery swarming this hilly golf course, was severely handicapped by a flu attack. He took a 73 for 215, which included a double bogey 5 on the 11th hole, where he four-putted from 18 feet.

He hit one putt too hard from three feet and the ball skipped two feet past the cup. He missed again coming back.

Littler, playing his home course, led going into the last nine holes. But Gene fell back at the finish.

National Open Champion Julius Boros, with a 71, Peter Butler of England, with a 69, and Al Geiberger, with a 72, were tied at 208.

Included in the 209 group were Tony Lema, 72; Mason Rudolph, 70; Dow Finsterwald, 70, and Rex Baxter Jr., who shot a 69 after scoring a 32 on the first nine.

There was no delay Saturday morning as had been the case in the first two rounds when the greens were frozen overnight. Wall had enjoyed a second-round lead with his 65.

Good weather was forecast for the final round Sunday.

McFain Wins Ent Bowling Tournament

Robert T. McFain and Robert Montgomery, both of Ent AFB, finished in first and second places, respectively, to top 53 other keglers in the First Annual Military and Civilian Bowling Tournament at Ent Lanes. The 55 bowlers were competing in the ten line handicap tourney for a total of $400 in prize money.

McFain, staff supply officer for the 71st Surveillance Wing, rolled 2,000 scratch for ten lines, aded to his 19 handicap for a 2,190 total, enough for first place and $200. He also rolled the tourney's high game, a 246 scratch.

Montgomery finished 50 pins behind the winner with 1,880 scratch and 2,140 handicap for second place and a check for $100. He works as a photographer at Headquarters Air Defense Command.

The tourney's third position went to Paul Long with 1,869 scratch and 2,102 with his handicap. Long, who took home $50 for his effort, bowls in a league at the Ute Lanes, Colorado Springs.

Fourth place and $25 went to Don Scott for his 1,976 scratch and 2,089 handicap totals. Scott rolls regularly at Bowl - Mor in the Springs.

Lary Goldsmith from Classic Bowl, in the city, rolled 1,845 scratch and 2,078 to finish just 11 pins behind Scott in fifth place. Goldsmith won a $15 prize.

Another Ent bowler, Ken Kuckenbecker, who works at the Base Conditioning Center, toppled 1,881 pins with a 2,074 handicap total to take $10 for sixth place. The last three finishers in the tourney were only separated by a mere 15 pins.

Mc Fain went into the ten game handicap tourney with a 182 average, but managed to toll an even 200 in the competition. It was enough to give him the match's top spot by 50 pins. Mac is a member of three league at Ent: Blue League, Gold League and the Aerospace League and carries more than 15 years of bowling experience to his kegling matches.

This is the first tournament he has ever entered. He carried an all time personal high series and game of 725 and 279 into the action. Beside bowling, McFain likes to take to the fairways occasionally for a round of golf.

What did he do with his earnings? He sent a $200 check to Regis College in Denver to help pay for his son's college education. Montgomery says he used his for some late Christmas shopping.

Altho the tournament's turnout was a bit lower than expected, bowlers at Ent and in the Pikes Peak Region can look forward to it again next year and probably for many years to come. It started off slowly, but is expected to flourish in future years.

This was the first tournament ever held at Ent pitting military and civilians against one another.

Grudge Tag-Team Match Slated For Pro Card at City Auditorium

Undoubtedly the most attractive card of the season is offered this week in the regular professional wrestling program at the City Auditorium. Four bouts are scheduled, including a match between midgets, a woman's match, a men's singles and the feature of a grudge tag-team battle.

The card gets underway at 8:30 p.m., as usual.

The feature match of the evening actually was started last week, but the finish this Tuesday night could be something to see. It all began in one of the roughest bouts seen here in years in a tag - team between The Green Shadow and Wild Bill Fletcher against Pedro Zapata and Rocky Smith.

Each team had won one fall and The Shadow and Zapata were battling away for the deciding pin. But just as time was about to run out, The Shadow grabbed some sort of metal object from his partner and banged Zapata over the head.

With Zapata out cold, The Shadow had little trouble in getting the final fall. However, the state commission later ruled the bout no legal decision and no contest.

Thus these same meanies will be back in the ring this Tuesday, and the promoters has said he will provide two referees to manage the free-for-all.

In one of the other matches, midgets will take the spotlight with Tiny Roc, a 104-pounder from Chicago, taking on Cowboy Bradley, a renown 92-pound battler from Texas. This one will go two out of three falls with a 45-minute time limit.

Still another feature will have the gals using the tricks of their trade with 135-pound Jessica Rogers from Chicago against Darlene Shields, 140-pounds, from St. Joseph, Mo.

There will be one other singles bout on the card.

The promoter said there will be no increase in price for this card. Advance sale of tickets will be handled at Blick's Sporting Goods, 119 N. Tejon St., and at Ring Military, 122½ E. Pikes Peak. Tickets will also be available at the City Auditorium box office the night of the wrestling.

Zimmerman Nets Second Straight Slalom Victory

By FERRY WIMMER
United Press International

WENGEN, Switzerland (UPI) —World champion Egon Zimmermann of Austria Saturday became the top favorite for the forthcoming winter Olympic games by scoring his second consecutive giant slalom victory within two days.

The handsome 24-year-old "glamour boy" from Lech Am Arlberg won his second giant slalom title of the Lauberhorn trophy meeting against an 81-man field from 19 nations.

United States stars who entered the meeting with high hopes were big disappointments. Bud Werner of Steamboat Springs, Colo., finished 34th, Chuck Ferris of Houghton, Mich., and Denver University, was 36th and Rip McManus of Milford, Conn., was 37th. Billy Kidd of Stowe, Vt., Jim Huega of Tahoe City, Calif., and Ni Orsi of Stockton, Calif., were disqualified for falls.

The Austrian champion hammered the world elite in the same Alpine region, high up near the Eiger glacier, in the same fashion as Friday when he scored a similarly impressive victory.

Zimmermann sped through the 56 gates of the one kilometer course which dropped 320 meters in 1:26.75.

Second was his compatriot Pepi Stiegler, of Lienz, in 1:28.50 and third the promising young Swiss from Les Diablerets, Willy Favre, in 1:29.09.

Devaney, McKay To Coach All-Americans

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI)—Bob Devaney, who directed Nebraska to victory in the Orange Bowl New Year's Day, Southern California's John McKay and Washington's Jim Owens will coach the West squad in the fourth annual All-America football game.

The American Football Coaches Association said today the game will be played in Buffalo's War Memorial Stadium Saturday night, June 27. Devaney, who will head the three-man staff, was an assistant to McKay when the West edged the East 22-21 last June.

Owens and Murray Warmath of Minnesota were co-coaches in the 1961 inaugural All-America game which produced a 30-20 West triumph. Ohio State's Woody Hayes led the East to their only success, 13-8 in 1962.

Olympic Ski Site 'Haunted'

By HANS BENEDICT

INNSBRUCK, Austria (AP)—Olympic teams from all over the world will begin arriving here during the coming week for the ninth Winter Games, wondering about weather that already has revived folk tales of a snow-hating dwarf who is spooking this area.

From the viewpoint of winter sports enthusiasts, the weather in the Alps couldn't be much worse this winter. Until a light fall began Friday, there had been no fresh snow around Innsbruck for six weeks. The depth on the Olympic ski courses had dwindled to nothing in some spots and 20 inches at best.

Farmers living high in the thick forests had begun repeating a centuries-old folk tale about a Lizum Valley shepherd who once refused to feed a hungry wanderer. He was turned into a gnarled dwarf, bringing bad luck upon people who cross his path—and presumably upon those who hope for plentiful snow for the Olympics.

Regardless of folklore, the Olympic organizers are optimistic and they're braced to handle the prospects of too little snow or too much.

They're prepared to hand-pack the vast ski runs if the shortage continues or to handle sudden heavy falls and possible avalanches that could block Olympic sites.

Friday's small storm dumped up to four inches of needed snow on the Alpine and Nordic ski runs and the weathermen predicted more to come before the games open Jan. 29.

Prof. Fridl Wolfgang, head of the Austrian organizing committee, stuck to his pledge to make these games the best in Olympic history, regardless of what the weather has in store. Progress of the preparatory work seems to bear him out. Some of the Olympic sites were in shape last week; others needed only finihsing touches.

The first athletes, a group of Japanese skaters, were due to reach Innsbruck this weekend. Soon afterward the Germans, Britons and Russians will move into the Olympic skyscraper villages on Innsbruck's eastern outskirts, where 1.271 athletes and 465 officials will be housed.

The giant special ski jump hill on Mount Bergisel and the smaller hill at nearby Seefeld for Nordic jumping were ready last week. The Seefeld will serve for training.

Wilkinson Quits at Oklahoma

By NORMAN ROWLAND

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Bud Wilkinson quit as one of history's most successful football coaches Saturday and said he frankly was interested in running for the U.S. Senate.

He otld the University of Oklahoma's Board of Regents he would like to continue as athletic director. But he later told newsmen that if or when he definitely decided to become a candidate, he'd quit that job, too.

The regents accepted his resignation reluctantly and there were some who indicated they'd like to try and change his mind.

A registered Democrat and an appointee of the late President Kennedy as head of the nation's physical fitness program, Wilkinson strongly indicated he would run as a Republican—if he ran.

But, in the manner of a football coach, the tall, good-looking 47-year-old Wilkinson evaded a lot of definite answers.

In 17 fabulous years as head coach, Wilkinson had teams that posted 145 victories, 29 defeats and four ties. Included in this were 47 straight victories, five perfect seasons, three national championships, 12 straight Big Eight championships and 12 straight years of never losing a conference game.

The Sooners last year won eight and lost two.

Wilkinson came to Oklahoma as an assistant in 1946, became head coach a year later when Jim Tatum went to Maryland and promptly made Oklahoma a scourge of the football world and the split-T formation almost the rule in college play.

As football coach and athletic director, Wilkinson drew $22,500 per year on a contract that was virtually lifetime.

Speculation centered on Gomer Jones, his veteran line coach, or Eddie Crowder, University of Colorado coach, as a successor. But the ranks of college coaches are filled with Wilkinson-taught coaches, including Darrell Royal, boss of the nation's No. 1 ranked Texas Longhorns.

The regents met in special session so Wilkinson could "explain my situation."

He said all of the rumors about him going to run for the Senate were eventually going to hurt Oklahoma's football recruiting.

"I am thinking of the team," he said in resigning as coach. He said, though, he'd like to continue as athletic director until he made up his mind whether to run for political office.

"It would neither be proper nor accurate to say I am not considering the Senate race," Wilkinson said.

"Frankly, I am."

He told newsmen after the meeting that he had two other personal considerations.

The death of his brother in Minneapolis means family obligations in reorganizing a business, and he also felt increasing obligation in the fitness program.

Wilkinson has continued to head this under President Johnson.

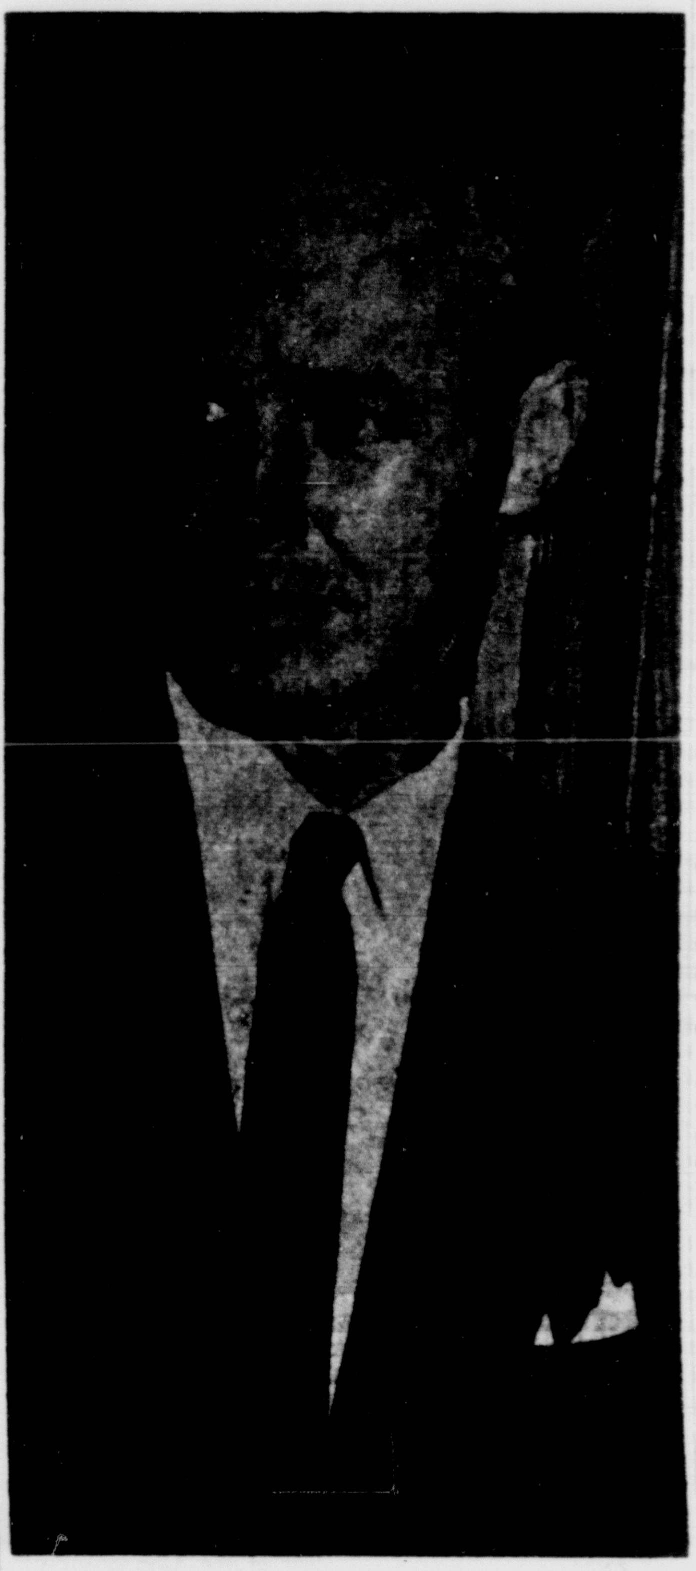
He said he had been thinking about the Senate race for "two or three months."

"I feel the experience I have had in Washington is one of the things that has led me to seriously consider it," he said in a reference to his duties as physical fitness director.

In answer to a question, he said he believes in the two-party system and admitted he had met earlier with Sen. Barry Goldwater and Gov. Henry Bellmon, the first Republican governor of Oklahoma.

And it was no secret J. Howard Edmondson—the man he probably will oppose—tried to get him to run for governor as a Democrat.

The Senate seat expected to be sought by Wilkinson is for only two years, the remainder of the unexpired portion of the late Sen. Robert Kerr's term.



RESIGNS OKLAHOMA GRID POST — Bud Wilkinson resigned Saturday as football coach at the University of Oklahoma, but said he wants to remain as athletic director. Wilkinson said he still is interested in making a race for the U.S. Senate. (AP Wirephoto)

Fairview Grapplers Post Win Over Palmer, 33-18

Palmer's wrestling team started strong but faded thru the middle weights and went down to a 33-18 defeat at the hands of Boulder Fairview at the Palmer Gymnasium Saturday afternoon.

The Terrors had a 10-0 lead after two matches when Eli Archuleta pinned Jim Galloway of Faiview in 3:15 at 95 pounds and Dave Bufmack was awarded a forfeit at 103. The trend was quickly reversed, however, as the visitors rebounded with three straight pins to take a lead they never again relinquished.

Troy Biglow pulled the Terrors close again by winning a 10-5 decision in his 133 pound match with Jack Kenyon of view. That cut the margin to 15-13 but John Reichert worked his way to a 6-3 decision over the Tribe's Lawrence Wright at 138. Mike Risk appeared on the verge of closing the gap again for the Terrors in the 145 pound match. He carried a 3-1 lead midway in the third period but suddenly became the victim of a reversal and the match ended in a 3-3 draw.

That left Palmer on the short end of a 20-15 score, still well within shooting distance, but Fairview came up with another pin at 154 and then picked up a forfeit at 165 when the Tribe's Frank Bernard suffered a rib injury in the first period.

The Terros' hard luck continued at 180 when Bill Cunningham, apparently on the way to an easy win with a 4-2 lead in the third period, suddenly was reversed and fell into a near-pin, losing the match 7-4. Ron Smith got the Tribe's final points as he controlled the heavyweight match in posting a 2-0 win over Terry Shantz of the visitors.

The defeat left the Terrors with a 1-4 record in dual competition. Their next action will be Friday at 3:30 p.m. in a South Central League match against Trinidad at the Palmer Gymnasium.

Bing Crosby Golf Tourney Set Thursday

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP)—Bing Crosby's golfing extravaganza swings into its 23rd edition Thursday with a bigger field and bigger purse than ever.

Although listed as an unofficial tournament by the Professional Golfers Association this year because of its pro-amateur format, the event still draws the top professionals and pays off in official coin of the realm—$60,000 of it.

Billy Casper won individual pro honors in the 1963 tournament with a 72-hole score of 285 in four days of exacting play. He collected $5,300. Then in the concurrent event, Doug Sanders collected $3000 as he and his amateur partner, Chicago industrialist Lloyd Pitzer, fired a 257 best-ball score for the pro-am title.

An amateur team with a pro each day with three courses in play—Monterey Peninsula Country Club, Cypress Point and Pebble Beach.

By Sunday, each team will have played each course with the final 18 holes always played at Pebble Beach for the low scoring 50 teams and pros.

Entertainers entered include Ray Bolger, James Garner, Phil Harris, Dean Martin, Donald O'Connor and Fred McMurray.

All three courses are tough and play to par 72. Each touches the Pacific Ocean at points and extends through sand dunes and into forest areas.

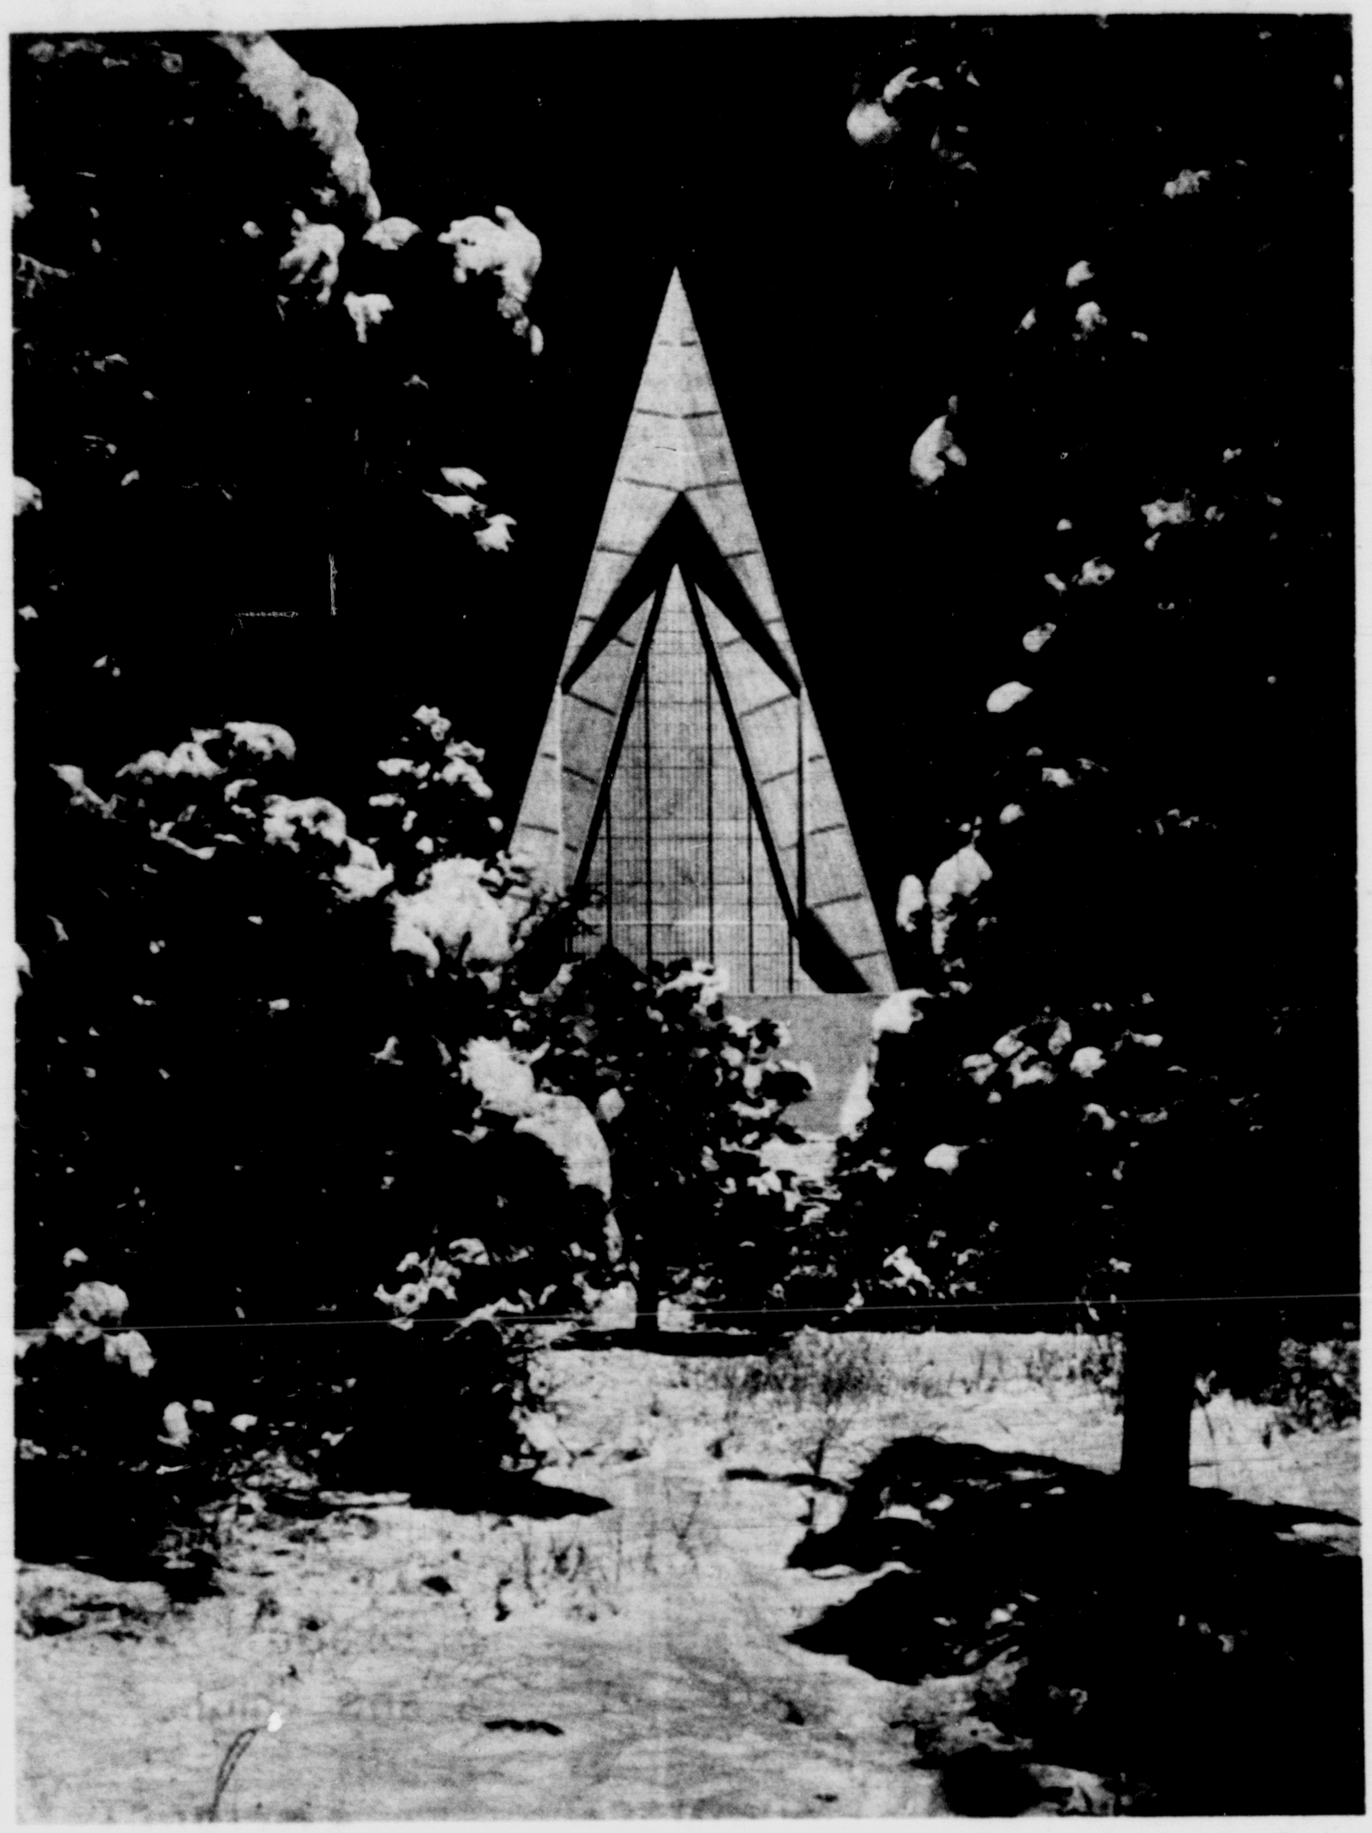
PENCIL BOOM

NEW YORK (UPI) — During 1963, the American consumer bought more woodcased pencils than ever before, according to the industry's trade association.

Sales climbed to more than 1.7 billion, almost a quarter-million over the figure recorded two years ago. Sales volume was $36 million an all - time high, according to Carl W. Priesing, executive vice president of the Lead Pencil Manufacturers Association.



SKYWARD BOUND — Anchored firmly on earth but pointing to the sky, this exterior view of the Air Force Academy chapel dramatically portrays that the design of the structure is appropriate for the cadets that it serves. Architects Skidmore, Owings and Merrill described their work as "The chapel of the future for the air force of the future."

ROOF VAULT ABOVE, WORSHIP BELOW — Cadets join in first worshipful service held in nave of new Air Force chapel. Sloping walls of the Protestant chapel at the Air Force Academy soar 95 feet to the vaulted roof above. Colored glass strip windows form ribbons of muted light alongside the tetrahedrons that compose the 17 repetitive spires on the exterior.

Air Academy Chapel Listed as Bold Stroke

The all-faiths chapel at the Air Force Academy has been described as a bold stroke - dramatic in its design, in an article published by "Tartan," a publication of the Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Company.

The article, written by Burton Seeker, Tartan staff member, is augmented by color photographs taken by Stewarts Commercial Photographers Inc., both of the outside of chapel as well as the divisions of its interior for Catholic, Protestant and Jewish worship.

Seeker points out the fact that the chapel was designed and singled out for expression of the emphasis placed on intellectual, moral and spiritual preparation at the academy.

The article describes the chapel as a study in contrasts and blends. From outside the edifice is a striking sight, having a single-color effect.

Seventeen metal spires soar 150 feet into the air, giving a strong feeling of flight and motion. The design is especially suited to its location below the peaks of the Rocky Mountains.

Strip windows of multi-colored glass appear as dark lines alongside the spires of tetrahedrons. At the end huge gables of tinted architectural glass admit most of the radiant heat striking them, but relatively little light.

The synagogue in the chapel is the first designed place of worship for Jewish service on a U. S. military base, according to the article.

Architecturally, it is a circle within a square: the circular design symbolizing the global mission of the air force. The square forms a surrounding foyer paved with Jerusalem stone. Outside walls are of purple colored glass panels alternated with green and blue glass strip windows. Inner walls are translucent glass panels set between stanchions of cypress.

The Catholic chapel, capable of seating 500 worshipers and a choir of 50, shares the terrace level with the synagogue. Sidewalls are panels of amber glass, alternated with strip windows of multi-colored glass.

Behind the altar is an abstract mural of Venetian glass carrying two figures of Italian marble: the Holy Mother and the Guardian Angel. Above and between these two figures is a marble dove, symbolic of the Holy Ghost. The 14 Stations of the Cross are in bas-relief.

Sloping walls of the Protestant chapel soar 95 feet to the vaulted roof. The overhead area of this chapel, on a level above the other two, is formed by the under surfaces of the tetrahedrons that compare the 17 repetitive spires on the exterior. Colored glass strip windows form ribbons of muted light alongside the tetrahedrons. Two ranks of walnut pews flanking the nave will seat 900. The choir area will hold 100. The terrazzo floor of the Protestant chapel is heavily soundproofed, so services can be held simultaneously in the various sanctuaries.

Stewart's Photographers, who have accomplished many outstanding picture assignments relating to the academy buildings including the chapel, were able to pictorially capture highlights of the chapel spoken about in the article.

During the dedication of the chapel last fall, Stewart Photographers were on hand to photograph the worship services held for the first time in the building.

Coin Club To Display Nickels

A complete set of the "silver" nickels minted during World War II will be on display at 2:30 p.m. today at the meeting of the Zebulon Pike Coin Club, 414 W. Pikes Peak Ave.

The nickels, minted from October 1942 to December 1945, contain 35 per cent silver, 56 per cent copper and nine per cent manganese. The coins were made of this composition when the country needed all available nickel for its defense program.

A recent announcement was that these wartime nickels are now valued at more than seven cents each. They were made at Denver, Philadelphia and San Francisco and are distinguished by the large mintmark on the reverse side.

A complete set of the 11 coins, uncirculated, is selling for about $30 to $35 to collectors.

The public is invited to view these coins and other specimens.

Carson Gates Show Heavy Car Traffic

Ask the military policemen manning Ft. Carson gates how many vehicles they wave in and out each day and they're like to answer "Ten thousand" and be underestimating.

Actually there are 10,714 privately-owned vehicles registered this week with the Fort Carson Vehicle Registration office, according to Nim Scott, noncommissioned-officer-in-charge.

So the 10,000 figure is probably low when the official Army vehicle using Ft. Carson entrances are considered. Especially since the majority of Ft. Carson family units live off-post and the majority of these families have vehicles.

Turnover is constant for Scott and his assistant, SFC Edgar Kiick. The two veteran MPs cleared 1,085 vehicles leaving the mountain post in December 1963 and there were a total of 14,753 registrations with permanent decals thruout 1963. An average of 600 temporary permits are issued each month.

Enlisted personnel account for 5,961 registrations with 4,245 in the top three pay grades. Some of the lower ranking enlisted men have cars but cannot have them registered on post until they comply with the inclusive and expensive for the under-25 age group, insurance requirements for Ft. Carson.

Next largest group is 2,360 civilian-owned vehicles belonging to civilian workers and to civilians with business interests on post such as delivery vehicles, salesmen and taxis.

Officers account for 1,672 decals—four of these are assigned to general officers.

Retired personnel have 721 registrations—413 enlisted and 308 officers—reflecting the increasing number of Armed Forces personnel settling in the region.

Another small but relatively permanent group are military widows and wives of men on overseas assignments who are living in the region. They are registered either as officer or enlisted or in th retired categories.

The buckboard originally was devised for use in rough and hilly districts of the U.S., according to Encyclopaedia Britannica.

Students Protest Deporting Defector

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP)—Angered at Japan's deportation of a Chinese defector to Communist China, 400 students at Taiwan Normal University pricked their fingers for blood and wrote a protest to the Japanese Embassy.

The students said in the protest, handed to the embassy Friday, the deportation was comparable to "placing a lamb in the mouth of a tiger."

The students were protesting Japan's decision to ship Chou Hung-ching, who defected from a Red Chinese trade mission two months ago, back to the Communist mainland.

Local Students To Be Honored At Dinner

Arthur W. Brown, assistant director of the College Entrance Examination Board's Advancement Placement Program, will be the featured speaker at a dinner Tuesday at Wasson High School. The dinner will honor Wasson and Palmer students in the advanced placement classes.

Prior to joining the College Board staff in 1962, Brown served as an assistant dean and dean of students in the School of General Studies at Columbia University. He was also an instructor and lecturer in English at Columbia and at Pratt Institute in Brooklyn.

Brown received BS and MA degrees, both with honors, from Columbia and is now completing work there for his doctoral degree. As an undergraduate he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa.

During his two-day visit to Colorado Springs, Brown will observe advanced placement classes at Wasson and Palmer and discuss the APP with teachers. The two local schools have advanced placement classes in English, history, mathematics, and science for academically talented students.

Advanced placement courses give students an opportunity to qualify for advanced standing or college credit is they attend one of the 765 colleges participating in the program.

Operation Friendship May Be Casualty in Panama

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Operation Friendship" may be one of the casualties of the anti-American rioting in Panama.

The Army-backed operation, an outgrowth of the last serious riots in November 1959, was designed, as the Army put it, "to turn Panamanians and Americans from enemies to friends."

Mainly, it was a people-to-people effort in which American servicemen and their families voluntarily performed good deeds of all sorts — at their own expense and on their own time.

Some American military units and groups adopted hospitals, orphanages, slum neighborhoods, entire villages. They helped build schools, taught English classes, donated clothing and blood. One band of off-duty servicemen gave one of the oldest churches in Panama City a long overdue coat of paint.

On Christmas 1962, teams of U.S. servicemen, their wives and youngsters went into all of Panama's nine provinces to distribute clothing, food and toys.

Some 500 orphans and underfed children were taken to Army mess halls for holiday dinners.

Maj. Gen. Thoedore F. Bogart, the U.S. Army commander in the Caribbean, gave "Operation Friendship" a sendoff in July 1960 and the president of Panama, in a proclamation, invited all Americans to come to his country and get to know his people.

On the first anniversary of the operation, President Roberto Chiari sent Bogart a letter hailing the progress, which Chiari said "demonstrates that friendship, when sincerely offered, is corresponded."

Use of Antibiotics Reported Spreading

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department said today research on the use of antibiotics is proving encouraging in the treatment of Anaplasmosis, an infectious blood disease of cattle.

Losses from this disease often run as high at $50 million a year. It is a problem in about 25 states in the South and West. So far attempts to develope a vaccine for the disease have failed.

Science for You

By BOB BROWN

PROBLEM: Echo and Reverberation.

NEEDED: A room with hard walls, and a mountain peak or solid single outside wall.

NOTE THIS: Call "Hello!" in a room surrounded by hard walls. A gymnasium with plaster or brick walls will do, or an empty room or hall with hard walls. The word will be heard re-echoing many times. This is reverberation.

Call "Hello!" toward a distant rocky mountain or a distant single outside brick or concrete wall, and the echo may be heard only one time. This is a simple echo.

HERE'S WHY: Sound consists of waves, which in air may reflect from a hard surface as light from a mirror or a ball from the floor. In the room the reflected sound (echo) may be heard several times if there is almost nothing in the room to absorb the sound. The reason a series of reverberations will not be heard in an ordinary room is that draperies, rugs, chairs, etc. rapidly absorb the sound energy.

The new collection of these Bob Brown experiments will be out this month, and on sale at bookstores. It is called "Science Circus No. 2." See it!

Drivers Will Trade Parking For Moving Lane

Once contending that he had a God-given right to park his automobile at the curb of any and every street, the motorist now is generally only too happy to surrender curb parking in favor of another lane for moving traffic, a Rocky Mountain AAA Club spokesman commented this week.

Clarence Werthan, auto club president, said that motorists today are far more concerned about having traffic flow smoothly than they are about being able to park in the street.

Most drivers, he explained, have reconciled themselves to the necessity of paying for an off-street parking spot in the downtown area. And most merchants in outlying areas, he added, are facing up to the necessity of providing free off-street parking in order to attract customers.

From the taxpayers point of view, commented Werthan, the removal of parking from a traffic-clogged street is especially desirable. An additional lane is provided for moving traffic without having to spend large sums of money for street reconstruction or for traffic engineering devices.

Actually, said Werthan, the elimination of parking and the addition of a lane for moving traffic has the effect of adding more than one lane. Where a parking lane exists, cars stopping to park interrupt the flow of traffic on one or more of the adjacent lanes.

Motorists save both time and money when a congested street is "opened up" by the elimination of parking and the addition of another lane for moving traffic, Werthan contended.

During the rush hour, several minutes can be cut from the home-to-work driving time. And this savings in time also means a savings in gasoline. Over a year's time, both types of savings can be significant, Werthan said.

Even more important, he pointed out, is the savings in emotional strain on the daily trips to and from work. Motorists caught in traffic tie-ups or temporarily blocked by cars stopping to park can get so upset that they cause accidents.

Werthan said that the auto club formerly got complaints from club members whenever parking was removed from a major street. Now, however, he reported, motorists seldom complain about the loss of curb parking.

"Those drivers know," said the auto club president, "they are getting, in exchange for the loss of parking spaces, something far more valuable — the free flow of traffic.

Color television, in a crude state, was demonstrated as early as 1930, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

Darol Dickinson Paints Horses; Highly Popular

Darol Dickinson of Ellicott, has the enviable job of painting horses.

The job of the artist-photographer is all the more enviable because with his artistry he has scored considerable success in the few years that the young man has taken up the task of transferring the images of horses onto canvas, for the delight and delectation of horse lovers.

Dickinson is of that breed of artists who are now called "Western." But this type of artist has flourished for centuries, and now, with an extensive horse-culture in the United States, this type of artist is again in much demand.

For a photograph alone will not capture the live personality of a horse, but a painting will. And horse lovers thruout the West, who have become aware of Dickinson's great talent, have been realizing this more and more.

So popular is the work of Dickinson, that an exhibit of his paintings at the Colorado Springs National Bank, has had to be arranged with photographs: The paintings are in such demand that they are scattered all over the Southwest.

Also shown in the exhibit are a number of superb drawings of horses.
